SUBMARINE SINKING PROBE CALLED

Full Public Investigation Is Announced

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 5—A full public investigation of the sinking of the submarine Thetis with the loss of 99 lives, was announced in the house of commons today by Prime Minister Chamberlain.

The prime minister said two forward compartments of the submarine were flooded through the front torpedo tube when the new underwater vessel met with an accident while carrying out acceptance trials in Liverpool Bay June 1.

Mr. Chamberlain disclosed that after the submarine was located she was lost for nearly 16 hours, presumably Saturday, when her marking buoy was cut away by the slipping of a wire placed around the hulk in rescue efforts.

The wire, he said, slipped the wrong way after being placed around the Thetis at 7:15 a.m., "cutting away the indicator buoy. The submarine was relocated at approximately 11 a.m."

The full story of the world's worst submarine disaster will not be known until the vessel is salvaged. The report of the naval

West Bids Farewell To King And Consort

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

WINNIPEG, June 5—The farmer returned to the fields today, the logger to the forests. Western Canada's peoples resumed their daily tasks, happy that King George and Queen Elizabeth had received such a hearty western welcome.

Their Majesties entered the west at Port Arthur May 23 and bade farewell at Sioux Lookout, Ont., last night, moving eastward for a second busy round of Ontario towns and cities.

In intervening days crowds flocked from the plains and mountains, from far up the coast of British Columbia, from the wooded northland, and the mines to pay enthusiastic homage. Cities found their populations doubled, even trebled, as at Saskatoon on Saturday when 125,000 persons massed in the city of a normal 40,000.

Melville, 100 miles northeast of Regina, gave Their Majesties a typical prairie greeting Saturday night. Men and women of every possible European origin among the crowd of 60,000 invading the town of 4,000 population.

The floodlit Melville reception led the Earl of Eldon, gentleman-in-waiting to His Majesty, to remark: "Who said this was a sparsely settled country? It is hard to realize after all the crowds we have seen that Canada has only 11,000,000 population."

TWO REST PERIODS

The round of strenuous activity as the royal train moved westward from Winnipeg through the southern plains and mountains to Victoria and back by the northern route was broken by two rest periods in Alberta's beautiful mountain resorts, Banff and Jasper national parks.

Forty hours of royal sight-seeing and relaxation at Banff ended on

Divers Seek Thetis Dead In Irish Sea

One of the first of four men to come bobbing to the surface after escaping from the sunken submarine Thetis was Capt. H. P. Oram, commander of the fifth submarine flotilla, though not in command of the Thetis. Said to have been selected as one of the first out because he could help direct further rescue operations, Oram is seen here, wearing gray coat, centre, aboard H.M.S. Vigilant, discussing operations at the scene. The Thetis lies below, in Liverpool Bay, in the Irish Sea.

The stern of the British submarine Thetis can be seen protruding above the surface of the Irish Sea, lower right. All but 18 feet of its 268-foot length slants sharply towards the bottom with its nose caught in the mud. Aboard when it went down were 102 men, but four of these bobbed to the surface by means of the Davis "lung" escape apparatus. Naval men who worked for their release can be seen approaching in small boats.

CANADA'S 18TH PARLIAMENT IS PROROGUED

Members Of Commons, Senate Write Finish To Five Months' Work

OTTAWA, June 5—Canada's 18th parliament has just concluded its fourth and perhaps last session. Members of the House of Commons and the Senate wrote a finish to five months work with a Saturday night prorogation, and left for their homes with the possibility that an election would be held before the year is out.

There has been no definite pronouncement by the government that there will be an election, but some circles on Parliament Hill feel convinced that members will have to face the electorate before they can resume their seats in the Commons next winter.

A bill to create a central mortgage bank shuttled back and forth between the Senate and Commons chamber until late Saturday evening before the Conservative majority in the Red Chamber, supported by one lone Conservative in the Commons, the veteran Hon. C. H. Cahan, Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George, withdrew opposition to its passage as originally drafted. Prorogation came at 10.30 p.m. (7.30 p.m. MST).

It was an unusual end to a session unique in several respects. During its life parliament was visited by the King and Queen for the first time in its history. A commons committee sat through to the very moment of prorogation for the first time, and for the last week of the session both the Prime Minister and the leader of the official opposition were absent, the former on official business and the latter holidaying.

Opened Jan. 12 last, the fourth and possibly last session of Canada's eighteenth parliament since Con-

Resignations Of MacFarland, Gray Believed Imminent

CALGARY, June 5—It is stated in high quarters of the Unity Council that a movement is afoot which will result in the resignations of John I. MacFarland as head of the Unity movement in Alberta, and the resignation of E. L. Gray, M.L.A., Alberta provincial Liberal leader.

It is well known these two gentlemen have been unable to come to terms as to who shall lead, and who is to follow, with the result that the interests demanding a united front against the present provincial government are demanding the resignation of both MacFarland and Gray.

IDENTITY OF LIBERALS NOT TO BE LOST

Calgary Group Not To Sink Principles In Any New Party

CALGARY, June 5—The Liberal party in Calgary in co-operating with other political parties has no int ntion of submerging its identity. They also bel eve they should have the right to their own opinions, according to a statement issued by J. M. Dillon, president of the Calgary provincial Liberal association.

The statement in full reads:

"There seems to be a misunderstanding with regard to the position of the Liberal party in the City of Calgary insofar as its position in regard to co-operation is concerned. It is being represented that the Liberal party is thinking only of party advantage; and that the good of the province is subordinated to that end; and that those in favor of a new party are the only ones whose sole aim and object is the good of the people of this province. Such is not the case.

"The officers of the Liberal party are quite willing to concede to others and to those who believe in a new party the right to their opinion and do not question their sin-

REFUGEE SHIP IS SIGHTED OFF FLORIDA COAST

MIAMI, Fla., June 5. — United States coastguard and immigration officials held themselves on the alert today as the German steamship St. Louis cruised in the vicinity of the Florida coast, 907 Jewish refugees aboard it having gained their first view of the land many of them hope eventually to enter.

The liner was sighted by the coastguard yesterday moving slowly past Fort Lauderdale. A patrol boat trailed it until sundown.

King Expresses Deep Pleasure Alberta Visit

Visit of Their Majesties to Alberta gave them happiest recollections, it was stated in a telegram received Saturday by His Honor Lieut.-Gov. J. C. Bowen from the King. Sent from Biggar, Sask., the wire read:

"We say goodbye to your province with real regret but we take away with us the happiest recollections of the beauty of its scenery and of the friendliness of its people. (Signed) George R.I."

Twenty Injured

LONDON, June 5.—Twenty persons were injured last night at Walsall, near Birmingham, when the wall of a burning theatre crashed into the street. The theatre was empty when the blaze started. At Clacton-on-Sea, Essex, a block of houses was burned with a loss estimated at $50,000. No one was injured.

72 Northern Kiddies Brave Illness, Storm, Cold To See Rulers

By J. E. DUNN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SIOUX LOOKOUT, Ont., June 5.—Seventy-two husky northland kiddies, ignoring sickness, cold and storm, cheerfully dared northern Ontario's water lanes to welcome King George and Queen Elizabeth here last night.

In two 50-foot scows the girls and boys from Red Lake and neighboring McKenzie Island rolled over windblown lakes and rivers for 160 miles southeastward to Sioux Lookout, gateway to the Patricia mining country 250 miles east of Winnipeg.

They were seasick, cold and uncomfortable during the 36-hour journey ended Saturday afternoon.

Royal Train Speeds East Toward Busy Round Of Greetings

By JACK CALDER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, June 5—Through cavernous rock-cuts and wooded valleys the blue and silver Royal train sped east today, bearing the King and Queen toward another and busier round of greetings from the people of Ontario.

The Royal couple will be greeted by thousands of Northern Ontario voices tonight at Sudbury. Then the train will push south to Toronto, to points in southwestern Ontario tomorrow morning for two days of celebration.

In contrast to the sleepy English town of Sudbury will be Ontario's Sudbury. Once Sudbury, Ont., dozed too, and then it became the eager hopping-off place for men who sought wealth in nickel and gold.

POPULATION TREBLED

Sudbury's population of 30,000—it was 2,000 just 35 years ago—will be trebled by an influx of residents of cities and towns built up by the mining and lumber industries, and of miners, prospectors and settlers from the remote, lake-dotted stretches of the province. Sault Ste. Marie, 190 miles west, will send scores of children for the one-hour royal visit.

No official function will be staged Tuesday morning at Toronto, where the King and Queen were greeted formally May 22. After a half-hur

BREN MACHINE GUN PROBE IS DEAD IN HOUSE

OTTAWA, June 5. — Inquiry into the Bren machine gun contract, carried on since March 9 by the commons public accounts committee, came to an unexpected end last night when it died—in the midst of its labors—with the prorogation of parliament. There wasn't even formal adjournment.

Gerald McGeer (Lib., Vancouver-Burrard) was in the midst of summing up the evidence when Ralph Maybank (Lib., Winnipeg South Centre) entered the committee room and said:

"You might as well quit talking, Gerry, parliament is dead."

First investigation of the contract was made by Mr. Justice H. H. Davis of the Supreme Court of Canada sitting as a royal commissioner. It was continued by the parliamentary committee.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

SUDBURY, Ont., June 5—The King and Queen will watch operations in the world's largest nickel mine tonight. At the King's request, arrangements were made today for Their Majesties to descend to the 2,800-foot level of the International Nickel Company's Frood mine.

The addition to the plans for a one-hour visit here will not interfere with the regular program, and the stay in the district will be lengthened to more than two hours.

Frood is the biggest mine of this nickel district that produces 90 per cent of the world's supply. It is 2½ miles north of Sudbury.

The first half of the original program will be carried out on schedule, with Their Majesties motoring to a civic reception at Athletic park. From the park the Royal party will cut off the scheduled route and travel at increased speed to the mine.

Company officials will escort them to the 3 shaft. The King and Queen will step into a six-by-twelve-foot miners' cage and drop 1,300 feet a minute to the main shaft station on the 2,800-foot level.

The King and Queen are scheduled now to arrive at Frood at 8 p.m. E.D.T., an hour and a half later than the original departing time.

Startled Gardener

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

ROYAL PRESS TRAIN, JASPER, June 5.—Butlers, footmen, men of high and low degree, have opened doors for Their Majesties to pass on their Canadian tour.

Uniformed staff officers, commissionaires and others have dashed to open doors to government houses, hotels, trains, cars and so forth.

It remained for William Glass, the gardener at Jasper Park Lodge, to have the unique reversal of those proceedings. The Queen sent for Glass and he arrived at the door of Outlook cabin and knocked.

He nearly fell through the porch floor when the door was opened —by the Queen.

Getting away from lords and ladies-in-waiting, Chamberlain's equerries and all the rest of the courtier attendance, Her Majesty revealed that still within her domestic heart is the simple, home-loving spirit of St. Paul's, Waldenbury, the English home where she was born.

She had only her personal maid with her at Outlook cottage, but she opened her own door to her own visitor, even though the visitor was but a gardener.

CHINESE HELD AFTER DEATH OF EDMONTON GIRL

CLOVERDALE, B.C., July 5. — A Chinese was held for investigation in this Fraser Valley town today while police probed the death of Miss Molly Robertson, 25, formerly of Edmonton.

The girl died Saturday, shortly after she was taken to hospital at nearby New Westminster, B.C., by two unidentified men. She was bleeding at the mouth then, but the cause of her death is undetermined. The Chinese, a vegetable peddler, was arrested at the hospital when he went there to ask the girl's condition, according to Chief Len Collahaw of the municipal police here

Street Railway Reaches Record In Day's Traffic

Edmonton street railway on Friday, day of the Royal Visit, set an all-time record for passenger traffic, it was reported Monday by Supt. Thomas Ferrier.

Estimate of the passengers carried was a total of 80,000, the previous record being 69,500, recorded on the Saturday before Christmas, 1937.

Despite the dense traffic, the street railway had no accidents, the nearest to a casualty being when an automobile bumped the street railway bus on 102 avenue, west of 124 street, and dented a fender.

DEMOCRACY HOME ISSUE PASTOR SAYS

Rev. Brown Preaches At Robertson United—Rev. McMinn Heard

The best way for Canada to aid in the "stop Hitler" sentiment is to make sure that democracy is working here at home; the best way to keep Communism out of Canada is to work for equality of opportunity right here in the Dominion so that Communism will have no opportunity to take root. This statement was made by Rev. J. Gordon Brown, pastor of Robertson United church, during the Sunday evening service.

Speaking on the subject "His Need, Our Imperative", Rev. Brown discussed what an individual can do to make a difference at a time like this. "This is a thought that is uppermost in the minds of most people because of the many changes both social and political in the world today."

COURAGEOUS BATTLE

"The biggest difference our individual lives can make is just to wage a courageous battle where we are. We do not need to go afield for opportunity to do right, the opportunity is right at our door," he said.

In conclusion he said, "Here then is a program for living. To know the Master, to start where are are, to do what we can. Who knows but that in a way we never guessed and never can know, that by making the Master's need our imperative, our lives may make a difference in a time like this."

McMINN SPEAKS

Taking the words of John the Baptist, last of the prophets, "He must increase, but I must decrease," Rev. A. K. McMinn chose "Changing Standards of Citizenship," as the subject of his sermon at McDougall church Sunday morning.

"The prophet was essentially a moral and social reformer but without the real power to effect the reforms he sought. He worked on life from without. Primarily, the work of Jesus is to the heart but it also touches the intellect. He works on life from within," Rev. McMinn said.

"The citizen of tomorrow will be a very high, responsible type, a fully autonomous personality with the law of life written in his heart. He will have the power to appeal to the hearts of others. Consequently there will be less and less legislation and regimentation in life and more freedom for individual initiative."

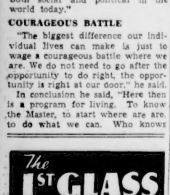

MISSIONARY IN NORTH COUNTRY PASSES SUNDAY

One of three brothers and two sisters who served as missionaries in the north, Rev. William Grove White, 78, passed away at his residence at 11522 87 street Sunday. He was the son of Colonel Charles Mills White of the 13th Madras Native Infantry and Sarah White. He was born in Madras, India, On November 12, 1860.

Educated at Harford, Mr. White spent several years on a sugar plantation in the West Indies, later coming to Canada where he graduated from the Guelph agricultural college. He answered a call to the ministry and coming west spent 40 years as a missionary and clergyman among the Indians in the vicinity of Grouard. His last few years were spent as an active minister at High Prairie where he had a large district to cover. He retired to Edmonton in 1933.

Surviving are his wife three daughters, Mrs. D. D. Hill, High Prairie; Mrs. K. W. Gunn, London, Ont., Miss Francis M. White of Ponoka; three sons, Harold, Carcross, Yukon, Charles, Vernon, B.C., Henry of Edmonton; four sisters, Mrs. Daisy Shepherd of Isle of Wight, England and Misses Edith, Mary and Emily of Wolverhampton, Staffordshire England and four brothers, Harold of Johannesburg, Africa, Arthur of Sumas, Washington, Rev. Arthur of Wolverhampton, Staffordshire, England, and Percy of England.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. from St. Faith's Anglican church with Rev. C. F. A. Clough officiating. Interment will follow in the Beechmont ceremony. Howard and McBride are in charge of arrangements.

AIR OFFICIALS TO VISIT HERE IN HUGE PLANE

United States Aviation Heads Will Fly In 40-Passenger Craft

Twenty men, prominent air officials of the United States, will be in Edmonton for a few hours Tuesday as they arrive on a good-will flight in advance of a trip to Lethbridge where the new Kenyon flying field is being opened Wednesday.

At noon they will be guests at dinner in their honor given by the city council and the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce.

The party will arrive from Los Angeles in a giant 40-passenger Douglas sleeper at the airport at 2 p.m., and will leave for Lethbridge at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

The huge plane may be inspected by the public during its stay at the airport, it was announced. It will be here long enough for 10,000 people to inspect it.

Thomas Wolfe, vice-president of Western Air Express, has arranged the trip.

In a letter to John Blue, secretary manager of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Wolfe said, "the United States Aeronautics Authority has set June 16 to hear the application for the extension of our route from Great Falls, Montana, to Lethbridge, connecting the air systems of the United States with those in Canada."

While here Mr. Wolfe and his party will gather information about air mail services and general use of aviation facilities to buttress the brief they will present on June 16 urging that the extensions to the route they are seeking will be granted.

Submarine

inquiry, Mr. Chamberlain said, would be made available at the public investigation which will be held as soon as the Thetis is brought to the surface.

The prime minister, giving report of the disaster as pieced together from details already known, said the men had been unable to close the watertight door behind the first compartment after the water rushed in through the torpedo tube. However, flooding had been restricted to the second compartment.

The main ballast tank was ruptured but the submarine continued to dive and struck bottom in about 240 feet of water in Dorpoll Bay, he said. This impact destroyed the signalling apparatus, making it impossible for the submarine to communicate with surface vessels.

A marker buoy was released, Mr. Chamberlain said, and smoke floats sent up but they were not observed by the escorting tug which was with the Thetis when she made her tragic dive at 1:40 p.m. Thursday.

To facilitate the escape of personnel, the prime minister said, all measures were taken by the escort to lighten the submarine and the stern thus came to the surface by daylight Friday.

BOARD PERSONNEL

Mr. Chamberlain said the personnel of the inquiry board was under consideration but he could not say when the public investigation would open.

Naval inquiries usually are private.

The prime minister said three men were believed to have been killed in trying to escape through the Davis lung method by which four men saved themselves.

One of the survivors, Captain H. F. K. Oram, "with gallantry took upon himself before he knew the submarine had been sighted to escape from the submarine under conditions which were realized to be most dangerous in order to direct operations," Mr. Chamberlain said.

He added that Oram reported conditions in the submarine then were becoming serious but all on board were still alive.

OPERATIONS FAILED

Mr. Chamberlain related that a strong tide made diving operations difficult and efforts to raise the protruding stern higher were unsuccessful.

To attempt to cut a hole in the stern in her position they would have incurred severe risk of flooding which would have been unjustified, he said.

Before Mr. Chamberlain made his statement, R. S. Johnson, managing director of Cammell Laird, Limited, builder of the Thetis, had announced that original cause of trouble in the sunken craft was water in the forward torpedo tube.

But no one could say as yet, he added, whether this resulted from damage to the tube or whether there was failure to shut the forward door.

Mr. Chamberlain, continuing his statement, said the stern was submerged that high tide. Later a wire was placed around the vessel but it slipped, cutting away the marker buoy.

PLANS ABANDONED

After a diver had reported he heard what he believed were tappings from inside the Thetis early Saturday morning, the prime minister said plans were made to attempt to pump air into the submarine.

But these were abandoned since it was found the operation could not be undertaken in time to save the lives of the entombed men.

Mr. Chamberlain, on behalf of the government and the house of commons, expressed "Profound sorrow at the loss of so many valuable lives and deep sympathy with the relatives."

He said the presence of additional personnel—the submarine carried almost double the number of her normal complement—in no way contributed to the sinking of the Thetis.

It was evident, he asserted, that the accident occurred while the vessel was submerged.

"Elizabeth R." Signs The Register

—By Bulletin Staff Photographer.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth is here shown signing the register of the Royal visit in the Alberta legislative chamber. The book, leather bound, contains signatures of Their Majesties and all those presented to them in the ceremonies on the steps of the buildings and within the chamber. The book will be kept in the Alberta archives. His Majesty signed first, inscribing "George R. I." The Queen then signed "Elizabeth R." Although chairs were brought for them, Their Majesties signed without sitting. At the extreme left is Premier William Aberhart and beside him is R. A. Andison, clerk of the legislature. His Majesty is seen talking to Lt. Gov. J. C. Bowen and Mrs. Bowen and looking toward the main door of the chamber.

Liberals

cerity in holding such an opinion. On the other hand, we believe that there can be conceded the same right to hold a contrary opinion and that our sincerity should be equally as freely admitted.

COMMON OBJECTIVE

"There can be no question, but that our objective is a common one, in that we all wish to have a government in this province which will inspire confidence and restore the credit of Alberta to a stability and progress. This being our common objective, the question that arises is, how best to accomplish that purpose; and it is in this respect that a difference of opinion has developed.

"Some advocates of Unity make the claim that it is of fundamental importance that the established parties be wiped out and that all those opposed to the present government must be united in a new party. The Liberal party claims that this is neither necessary nor advisable. The Liberal party composed of those whose chief bond of union is opposition to the present government, there must of necessity be differences of opinion as to the best policies to pursue in the future. The Liberal party does not stand for the vested interests of this country; but has stood, and will continue to stand, for the best interests of the common people.

"Speaking as president of the provincial party in this city, and for its executive, I wish to make it clear beyond misunderstanding that the Liberal party will not sink its principles and submerge its identity in any new party composed of many who do not share our political opinions. Further, in so far as the province is concerned, this is the declared policy of the party.

"No individuals, or groups of individuals, whether presently or formerly connected with the Liberal party, have any right or authority to express any other view in regard to the Liberal party."

NO OBJECT

"The foregoing, being thoroughly understood, there is no object in either those who believe in a new party or ourselves posing as the exclusive saviours of the country. If we are sincere men and women, we will concede to one another the right to hold sincerely different opinions, as to the best method to accomplish our common objective; and we will not question the motives of any of the contributing parties along a certain line can only cause confusion; and unless those contributing parties can carry into the new movement the whole 100 per cent. of their strength then that movement cannot succeed.

"The Liberal party, this city is willing to meet accredited representatives of any parties, new or old, who also intend pulling candidates in the field, for discussing the best methods to adopt to most efficiently marshal the opposition against the present government. To meet others for the purpose of discussing the wiping out of the Liberal party on this city is a useless waste of time.

CONTRARY VIEW

"Insofar as the claim that one party is the best means to accomplish our common purpose, we hold an entirely contrary view. We think that such a method is useless because it will result in failure and misunderstanding; that it is undesirable because it will divide the people into objectionable class division; and further that it is unnecessary in this city with the proportional representation system of voting obtaining. To unite the 'Haves' in one party leaves no alternative to the 'Have-nots' but to unite against them. Obviously the Liberal party, composed as it large-

HENRY DANIEL DIES 72 YEARS: WAS ARMY MAN

Following a lengthy service in the army, Lt.-Col. Henry Edward Daniel, 72, of 9732 105 street, died here Saturday. He was one of the early pioneers of Alberta and during his lifetime served with eight different military units.

Born at Workship, Nottinghamshire, England, on Nov. 1, 1867, he was educated at the famous Bluecoat school there. He came to Canada in 1887, and was resident of Alberta from 1896 until the time of his death.

He served for three years with the Bloomsbury Rifles; three years with the Second Oxford Rifles; three years with the Canadian Mounted Rifles; a year with the Alberta Mounted Rifles and for several years with the 19th Alberta Dragoons. He also served with the 49th Battalion and the 194th Highlanders. Rimbey Child Run Over On City's Street

Constance Halpin, three-year-old daughter of Dr. Halpin of Rimbey, was knocked down and run over by an auto allegedly driven by J. F. Dodds, 12135 93 street, while crossing Jasper avenue in front of the Stanley Block Saturday afternoon.

Rushed to the Royal Alexandra hospital in Dodds' car, the little tot was detained overnight, but was discharged on Sunday.

Police arrested Dodds on charges of dangerous driving and being intoxicated in charge of a car. He was released on $2,000 bail.

"The Liberal party is determined to give those who believe in its policies and principles an opportunity to vote for those who express such principles and policies; but at the same time we are willing, and have so expressed ourselves many times, to co-operate with others, who hold equally sincere views, toward the end that our common objective of better government may be attained. This method will ensure the full strength of the Liberal party, and other parties, being brought to bear on such objective, and any attempt to force all into one party can result in nothing but loss of strength.

HONEST CO-OPERATION

"When it is remembered that in the last election Social Credit polled approximately 24,000 votes in Calgary, and Labor-Socialist-Co-operation, including Liberal, Conservative and others, only polled approximately 17,000 votes, it is apparent that Unity alone will not result in any material change; but all lines of thought must be considered and fairly treated, so that the undoubted lack of confidence in the government can be expressed at the polls. We believe that this can be most effectively accomplished by co-operation; and, as far as Calgary is concerned, the Liberal party is prepared to give such fair and honest co-operation."

federation lasted four months and 22 days.

The dispute between the commons and the Conservative majority in the senate, and the continued battle between government and opposition members over the Bren gun contract in the public accounts committee, provided unusual confusion to the prorogation. In the end the senate bowed to the all but unanimous wish of the commons on the central mortgage bank bill, but the public accounts committee only ceased battling when the prorogation of parliament put an end to its life.

Sir Lyman Duff, chief justice of Canada, and deputy to the governor-general, officiated at the prorogation ceremony in the senate chamber. The Speech from the Throne was short and drive expression to the government's satisfaction that the King was able to give royal assent in person to the bill ratifying the Canada-United states trade agreement and its gratification at the universal and heartfelt rejoicing at a time when plans are being honored by the visit of their Sovereign."

Old Contemptibles Get Royal Thanks

Peter Packham of the Edmonton Imperial "Old Contemptibles" has received a message of thanks from His Majesty for a letter in which he wished Their Majesties "heartiest greetings and wishes for an enjoyable tour and safe return."

The reply from the King was as follows:

"The Private Secretary is commanded by the King to convey His Majesty's sincere thanks to the Imperial 'Old Contemptibles' of Edmonton, Alberta, for their message of loyal assurances.

WEST EDMONTON TORIES TO NAME CANDIDATE SOON

Conservatives in West Edmonton Federal riding will select a candidate to carry the party's banner in the forthcoming general election at a convention to be held at the Masonic Temple on Wednesday evening, June 7.

Hon. M. A. Macpherson, K.C., Regina and runner-up to Hon. Dr. Robert Manion, M.C., for the national leadership of the party at the Ottawa convention last July, will be the main speaker at the convention.

Three candidates are likely to come before the convention. They are Ald. James H. Ogilvie, standard bearer in the 1935 campaign; L. Y. Cairns, K.C., prominent Edmonton lawyer, and Col. F. C. Jamieson, K.C., a former member of the provincial legislature and a candidate in the riding in 1926.

Two other conventions are listed for this week. The Conservatives in the Wetaskiwin riding will hold their convention on Wednesday afternoon, when it is expected that C. R. Russell, K.C., Wetaskiwin lawyer, will receive the nomination. Mr. Russell unsuccessfully contested the seat in the 1935 election.

Thursday afternoon a nominating convention will be held at Red Deer to choose a candidate in that riding. Mr. Macpherson will be the principal speaker at these conventions.

Nomination of a candidate for the Edmonton East riding will be held later this month.

32 Known Dead

MEXICO CITY, June 5.—With 32 known dead, workers today prodded through the ashes of nearly 100 houses of the village of Zacatepec, Morelos state, seeking more victims of a fire which started Saturday night in a movie theatre. Forty-two persons, seriously injured, were removed 90 miles to Mexico City for treatment.

Annual provincial convention of the C.C.F. will be held in Edmonton July 31 to August 2 inclusive, secretary Elmer Roper announced on Monday. Provincial executive of the party met in the city on Saturday to review party matters. Guest speakers at the convention have not yet been decided upon, Mr. Roper said, suggesting that prominent leaders of the party from outside the province may be invited.

PROVINCE GETS SOAKING RAIN OVER WEEKEND

Checking soil drifting and grasshopper hatching in the south and speeding the germination of late crops in the Edmonton and central districts of the province, soaking rains fell over the week-end from Lethbridge to Edmonton. No reports of heavy rain were received from the near northern areas Monday morning, only Falher reporting a light fall Sunday.

Cool weather along with additional rain is forecast for Monday and Tuesday.

Holiday activities in Edmonton were limited as the steady drizzle, beginning at 10:40 a.m. Sunday, continued for the rest of the day. It was still raining Monday morning.

Weather instruments at the local meteorological station had registered a moisture total of .51 inches by Monday morning.

Local temperatures were held to comparatively low readings Sunday, rising to a maximum of 68 above since the rain began to fall. At 9:30, before the showers started, a high for the day was registered when the mercury touched the 51 above line. Overnight low was 43 above and came early Monday morning.

Scattered showers first began to fall in Calgary around noon Saturday, a total of .55 inches of moisture was recorded at last reports from the southern city, early Monday morning.

Near northern weather was mostly clear and calm, with only a few points reporting cloudy skies. Temperatures there ranged from 44 to 60 above.

125,000 SEE ROYAL COUPLE IN HUB CITY

Saskatoon Gives King and Queen Typical Prairie Welcome

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SASKATOON, June 5.—A typical prairie welcome, unmatched in the Royal tour through Canada, was given the King and Queen Saturday as they spent nearly two hours in this hub of the Saskatchewan wheat belt and for the first time saw farm implements and the grain that makes their daily bread gush from threshing machines.

More than 125,000 persons crowded the 11-mile Royal route and the King and Queen heard Indians, Austrians, Germans and Poles cheer them as they drove through predominantly foreign-born sections.

But the picture that probably will stay in the Royal minds longest is of seven-year-old Marcelein Mc-Eachern, daughter of an Alderman, presenting the Queen with a bouquet of roses. Marcelein, a brunette and pretty, stole the show at the arrival.

Dressed in pink Miss Marcelin curtsied perfectly to the King and Queen. She looked so dignified and stately that the King could not contain himself and burst into laughter.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, a bachelor, fell in love with Marcelin immediately and insisted she stand beside him while 70 prominent Saskatchewan citizens were presented to the King and Queen.

A choir of 700 collegiate girls the National Anthem and "Land of Hope and Glory" as Their Majesties arrived and held flags above their heads to form a huge Union Jack which the King and Queen admired greatly.

DRESSED IN BEST

The girls, young and beautiful, typified the happy, smiling people who have greeted their Majesties throughout the west. As in other cities, everyone in Saskatoon was dressed in Sunday best and there was a smile on every face.

The Royal couple followed a colorful route through wide streets, bright with flags, streak of rain evidence of the hard times Saskatoon has had in the past few years, but also emblematic of the faith of the people in the sovereigns.

They visited the University of Saskatchewan, which has grown in 30 years from raw prairies to a beauty spot. Around the campus they were cheered by 10,000 school children, and received a formal address by the university president, J. S. Thompson.

SASKATOON DISPLAY

The Royal car travelled through the city again and at the Freight sheds saw a display aimed at presenting the Saskatoon of a decade ago, a Saskatoon when exports was busy, when farm machinery was unloaded by the trainload and industry thrived.

The King and Queen saw giant tractors working, combines cutting imaginary grain and threshing machines doing the hazard work. On the ground were piled bushels of grain that made Saskatoon. Wheat grown that was used for the demonstration.

The Royal couple then passed through a crowd of 30,000 school children who came to Saskatoon from every part of the province. They saw Doukhobor youngsters, Ukrainians, Germans and Mennonites, all waving Union Jacks in symbol of their devotion to the crown which unites them.

INDIAN CAMP

They passed an Indian encampment where Sioux redmen from Dundurn and Cree Indians from reserves north and west of North Battleford—some of whom fought against white men in the Riel rebellion of 1885—greeted Their Majesties.

Early in their stay the Royal couple heard Thomas Swain, a 104-year-old pioneer, shout a welcome to them, the lean, deeply tanned, white-bearded man who came here from Northumberland once was a Riel rebel and is the son of an English father and Cree Indian mother.

The greatest day in Saskatoon's history was all too short for the thousands who left rude farmsteads and lonely shacks to pay their mode of tribute to the rulers of the world's greatest empire. They stayed in town far into the night and kept streets that normally are deserted at sundown alive until midnight.

J. T. Wilson Here Northbound On Mineral Survey

J. T. Wilson, of Ottawa, came to Edmonton Monday morning prior to going to Wray Lake, northwest of Vermilion, where he will conduct a geological survey on behalf of the Dominion government.

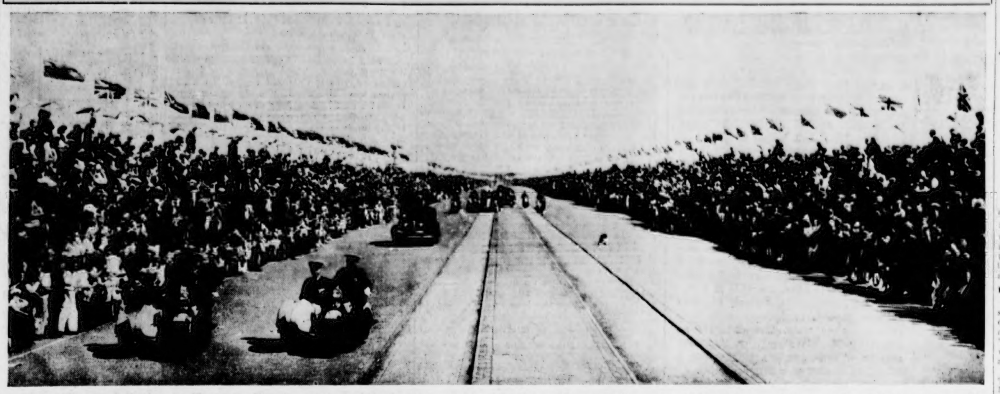

Included in his party are J. D. Allan and C. H. Richardson, both University of Alberta students, and J. M. Browning, University of Saskatchewan, and B. Cannell, University of Manitoba.

Mr. Wilson said he plans to be engaged on the geological survey in the north till September.

175 Births Here

Births in Edmonton during May totalled 175, according to figures released Monday by the provincial vital statistics office. This is a decrease over the figures for May, 1938, when 234 births were recorded. In April of this year there were 285. Marriages in May of this year totalled 86 as against 162 in May, 1938, and 123 for April of this year. Deaths in May totalled 77 as against 74 in May, 1938, and 105 in April of this year.

5 Miles of Filled Bleachers—70,000 Roar Greeting

You will never look upon its like again. Here is a picture of the longest grandstand in the world—nearly five miles of bleachers—specially erected on Portage avenue for the Royal visit last Friday. On these seats estimated 70,000 Alberta residents, roared a full-throated traditional western welcome to Their Majesties. There has never been a sight to equal it in the history of this city and probably not within the lifetime of anyone in the picture, will the scene be duplicated. In no city of the Dominion has there been a sight to equal this and Their Majesties, prior to leaving the city, expressed their appreciation.

Thousands Rural Folk Express Supreme Joy At Sight of Monarchs

By FRANKLIN McKITRICK

"We came to see the King." Thousands of rural folk from Edmonton's tributary territory shouted it to the skies Friday, their voices thrilled with pride.

On one bench of the Portage avenue bleachers sat a happy group of livewire new Canadians. Bright-eyed Johnnie, 12, declared the King's job was to "keep the laws." Nancy and Mary and Emily were shy with stage fright but after seeing the smile of their Queen they smiled, too. They came from Ferry Trail School, near Waskatenau, with their teacher, Miss Kotiak, chaperoning the lucky 13 children, old enough to understand what it all meant.

More than one little visitor said they had a "swell" picture of the King and Queen in their cameras. "If it turns out good."

"But not as good as I have in my own memory," declared one proud youngster.

An Edmonton man proudly told his bleacher neighbors he knew the Queen when they were both twelve years of age, in Witwell, Hartfordshire.

"She came to the flower show with the rest of us, mingled with us at the tables and now she is a real Queen," he said with pride.

ODD INCIDENT

Mrs. Hayhurst, wife of William Hayhurst, M.P., of Vegreville, who helps legislate Canadian laws in Canada's House of Commons, after her husband has described the contacts with the Royal Party at Quebec, Ottawa and at Edmonton, related an odd incident that occurred on the train when an aged French-Canadian lady, learning that Mrs. Hayhurst had shaken hands with the Queen, desired the inspiration of shaking hands with the hand that shook hands with the Queen.

Two aged Indians were observed intently studying portraits of their Great White Father and his Queen. To them the regalia and robes of office had an intense interest.

The Indian encampment near the end of Portage avenue included delegates from the reserves of Hobema, among them Moniannas, Samson, Ermineskin, and Louis Bull.

Wabamun, Lac Ste. Anne, Riviere Qui Barre, Winterburn, Cold Lake, Saddle Lake, Good Fish Lake, Drift Pile, Lac la Biche and non treaty roamers from Rocky Mountain House were also represented.

The oldest Chief, Samson of Hobema, has been chief for 37 years and is over 80 years old.

BUCKSKIN SUIT

Joe Rabbit cut a picturesque figure as interpreter, clad in a buckskin suit which each caught the eyes of Their Majesties.

In their own words the Indians sang God save the King as sincerely loyal as any other Canadians in the vast throng.

One lady, an old timer of the Sturgeon district, said she came to see the Queen. "I love that Queen," she glowed. Beside her a teen-aged girl informed her little wide-eyed sister that "Queen Elizabeth II is the Conqueror of Canada." It was a conquest made by sincere worthwhile womanliness and a beautiful smile.

A sample of what was going through the minds of the Portage avenue crowd was voiced by C. H. Tilby of 13445 103 street. He saw Queen Victoria in 1887 and 1897 Jubilees, on the Kaiser's visit, and attended Victoria's funeral and the Edward VII coronation.

He saw George V as Duke of York, Edward VIII as Prince of Wales, both overseas and in Canada, and the present King when Duke of York.

Mrs. Tilby was at the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria when she was about the age of her little daughter Eileen who sat on Friday with her parents to see George VI.

"We want children to see the King and Queen for we look on the King as the father of the British and family of Canadians in a national sense," said Mr. Tilby.

There were occasional bursts of humor in the crowd. When a youth wearing a label in large type was asked where is Island Lake? the high s ing lad simply turned, smiled and slapped the crest on his chest. "It's here," he said, "and it's here to cheer the King and Queen."

EMPIRE FREEDOM

One new Canadian of central European descent of the second generation who was an usher was asked why the throng came. He said, "To cheer their King," adding, "Because the freedom of the British Empire makes the Europeans loyal to the principles of liberty and justice."

S. S. Rowsell, a Scout official, said the reason the Boy Scouts came to see their King, was "to voice their loyalty to the British Empire, for we believe the King is the central figure which we all recognise as a democratic people."

Pretty touches of color and harmony in action were evident in the cases of Joyce Bellamy, 12158 101 street, happy Highland lassie come to welcome the Queen of Scotland as well as the Queen of Canada, harmony in both color and in sentiment was emphotie in the Red, White and Blue clad children of the Catholic Schools with Father Green leading the happy entertaining choir assisted by the Killam School Band.

IS GOOD KING

Mrs. Lauber of Tofield, with her four children, said "We came because we wanted to see the King. He is a good king." She has lived thirty years in Alberta, coming from the States, and is of German descent. But one of her daughters added, "We are Germans but can not talk German." They came fifty miles and were happy to show their loyalty to "our British King."

By truck and bus and train many parties travelled over 300 miles to Edmonton; 250 miles was considered nothing at all. One group of farmers who came from near Spokane, said they thought there would be a small crowd here till they found that they were only a few of similar thousands who crowded into Edmonton for the day.

A few came from Saskatoon. Some made the trip in a day. Others in a day and a night; others made it a jaunt of almost a week, as for example, those who came flying marched to their places of the B.C. Block schools north of the Peace.

C. W. Fredericks flew in from Grande Prairie in an hour and a half. As proprietor of both Peace River Record and Grand Prairie Herald he has to go places in a hurry. He had seen royalty before.

At the school camps behind the bleachers as the zero hour neared eager children cried "Hurry, Hurry," fearful that they would miss the sight they had travelled weary miles to see. It was "tramp, tramp, tramp," as Scouts, school groups from district divisions with banners flying marched to their places.

TRAIN COMING

The loud speaker told the crowd all about the coming of the Royal train, and soon outlooks perched high on the top rails of the bleachers reported the train coming down past the airport.

The rain then covered the depot crowd singing the National Anthem, and the crowd on the bleachers stood bare-headed and sang in tune with the radio.

Some had done more than sing their loyalty as was evident by the medals and decorations of the ex-service men. One soldier of the S. A. Band who wore his medals had served from 1914 to 1918 and had been wounded five times.

To both Indians and many white Canadian children who had never before seen a city with all the wonders of modern city life it was "a wonderful wonderful time."

The names over the bleacher seats were significant. From Bear Creek, twelve miles beyond the railway near Cold Lake, about 250 miles N.E. of Edmonton came Miss Loiselle, teacher, with her pupils Bella Poirier, Emma Poirier, Rosa Laplante, and Paul Poirier. Only one had seen a city before. They all plan to see Edmonton on Saturday. They made the trip in nine hours at a cost to the parents of two dollars per child.

Transported by their school secretary Mr. E. E. Otto, from Woodside school 80 miles east came teacher Miss M. Bennett and ten pupils.

From other schools they came in trucks loaded to the limit, from Mundare, Wostok and Smoky Lake. Tired looking parents were noted with tousle heads, mothers holding tight to a chain of children that none might be lost.

Teacher George Meronyk came from Northern Alberta 35 miles north of Smoky Lake and brought 23 pupils, about a third of his school.

FROM ATHABASCA

A happy load came from Meanook 80 miles Athabasca. Teacher Mr. Lepchinski, with 40 pupils came from Pardskavea school, about 65 miles north, by another truck came Steve Shewchuk and Mr. Huculak from Manawan, near Whitford, with about thirty.

Another division marched past at the quick step to take their appointed places.

From Stone school, near Alix, 100 miles southeast, came Teacher Jas. Breckenridge with ten pupils and about 16 adults. Their roll call showed such names as Macdonald, Russel, Webb and Crawford. Mr. McDonald, when in England years ago, was a guard at Buckingham Palace. He was unable to come but sent two of his children.

For one and all the Great Adventure of their lives was this royal visit with the King and Queen of Canada. To them all today it is an enjoyable memory.

Sioux Lookout Girl Looks Out On Perch Of Six-Foot Stilts

ROYAL PRESS TRAIN, SIOUX LOOKOUT, Ont., June 5.—Seven-year-old Daphne Redding stole the show at Sioux Lookout when Their Majesties arrived here Sunday night. Across Canada a million brains have worked to evolve new ideas to see Their Majesties under crowd handicaps.

There have been periscopes from coast to coast; small boys doing a land office trade in soap boxes; imitation shooting sticks; in Vancouver folding seats, and so forth.

But Daphne Redding's name leads all the rest.

At Sioux Lookout high above a huge crowd, young Daphne strutted around on six-foot stilts, a tiny white elf floating up over the heads of everyone.

She had been up on the stilts over 2½ hours when the royal train arrived, perfectly balanced, she had the clearest picture of what was going on. The tiny youngster stalked her way to a thousand front pages.

Scotland Yard Inspector Confident of Loyalty Of Canadian Crowds

MELVILLE, Sask., June 5—Inspector J. Giles of Scotland yard, accompanying the King and Queen on the Royal tour, has confidence in the loyalty of Canadian crowds.

The blond inspector stood calmly by while King George and Queen Elizabeth walked unguarded among a crowd of 60,000 wildly cheering people milling around the railway station here Saturday night.

After 12 years as guard to royalty, Giles is a keen judge of a crowd's temper and, asked if he were not worried, smiled and replied: "Not a bit afraid with that crowd. They would not let any harm befall Their Majesties."

Disabled Veterans Chat With Monarchs

By CHARLES GUNNING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG, June 5—Disabled veterans, nurses and orderlies of Winnipeg's Deer Lodge military hospital chatted with Royalty Sunday.

When King George and Queen Elizabeth stopped here on their way back to eastern Canada, Their Majesties mingled for half an hour with the veterans and hospital staff in the temporary privacy of the Canadian National Railways' station rotunda.

Their Majesties' sympathy and consideration for Canada's war heroes was proven again as the King and Queen strolled informally around the echoing hall where more than 1200 veterans, together with the nurses and orderlies, paid homage to the British sovereigns during a brief visit which ended when the Royal train left at 12:57 p.m. C.S.T.

ASKS MEN TO SIT

Immediately after the Royal couple entered the cheer-choked rotunda, King George demonstrated his democratic spirit. Motioning with his hand to the men standing at attention, His Majesty turned to District Administrator Major J. P. Oliver and said:

"Please ask the men to sit down. They must be tired."

Slowly the Royal couple circled the rotunda, one by one the veterans shaking hands with the King and Queen.

Several times the King and Queen expressed regret that the Royal car had not stopped at Deer Lodge hospital when Their Majesties toured Winnipeg May 24. Sunday's visit was unscheduled.

"I'm sorry we couldn't come before," Her Majesty told Ted Fletcher, a blind veteran. To another she said: "This is a better show anyway."

RECALLS MEMORIES

Memories of Queen Elizabeth's girlhood days at Glamis Castle in Dundee, Scotland, were brought back to Her Majesty when she stopped to talk with war veteran George Fife. Fife told the Queen he was born only three miles from the castle.

"Oh, I'm so glad to see someone from home," Her Majesty said. "How long is it since you were back?"

Fife told the Queen that last time he was home was when he was on army leave in 1917.

"The old place hasn't changed much." Her Majesty told him. "It is just about the same today as it was then."

CHEERS BREAK OUT

Resounding cheers broke loose as the King and Queen made their way back to the station platform, and as the Royal train pulled away, another burst of applause roared out. Veterans saluted their farewells and nurses waved goodbye.

For the war veterans it had been a perfect day—the King and Queen had not forgotten them. The fullness of their e thusiasm was summed in a few short words by an orderly who said: "I'd fall in line for them anytime."

Royal Party Parks Only Six Miles from Edmonton On Eve of Departure

By THOS. WAYLING
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

BIGGAR, Sask., June 5.—The blue and silver "covered wagon" of Canada's royal visitors rested Friday night at Clover Bar. With a fine modern hotel six miles away at Edmonton the King and Queen maintained their Canadian tradition and camped in their train on the prairies.

After an amazing demonstration which lasted all evening in Edmonton, Their Majesties left the Airways City shortly after ten o'clock.

The pilot train had preceded them by half an hour and when it came to rest at Clover Bar siding the radio filled the air with the tumultuous shouts of the people of Edmonton six miles back.

About 11 o'clock the headlight of the royal train shone its distant beam into the observation car of the press train and on the reporters and radio men gathered there.

The light increased in brilliance, and there was a bit of a thrill when it was found to be on the same track as the parked pilot train.

CLOSER AND CLOSER

It came closer and closer, slowing down and creeping up on the pilot train, until it stopped within six feet of the pilot observation car.

The royal engineer climbed down from his cab and came to the front of his engine to see how close he was. "Hey," called out a press man, from the observation car, "you can come in but you'll have to leave your engine outside."

The two trains settled down for the night in line ahead. Flood lights were placed at each end facing inward and so illuminating the sides of each train as R.C.M.P. officers took up guard, the flood lights enabling them to see anyone approaching the royal trains.

In the foremost baggage car of each train is an independent engine and generator, operated by steam from the locomotive. The Royal trains park so much and use so much light that their batteries would soon run down without this auxiliary lighting plant.

The people of Alberta, like those of the other provinces, showed their consideration for the royal party and few approached the train during the night, nor was there any noise of motor horns.

It was a clear moonlight night over the prairies, cool and quiet, a perfect night for sleep.

During the night the C.N.R. Continental Limited slipped past quietly, her engine purring as though not to disturb the royal sleepers.

The train was late, due to the operation of the royal trains, and she carried with the usual passengers R.C.M.P. officers who had been on duty in Edmonton and were then on their way to Saskatoon.

On a little spur track at Clover Bar a tourist sleeper had been parked to accommodate the train crews of the two royal trains. They would only get about five hours rest as the trains were scheduled to pull out shortly after 5 a.m.

BRAVELY DECKED OUT

The trains were rolling when Their Majesties awoke, and as they looked out of the windows into the bright sunny morning under a cloudless sky, they saw people gathered at every little way station.

At one spot a single red painted railwayman's house stood, but it was bravely decked in red, white and blue bunting and his wife and two daughters were outdoors in clean white dresses to give Their Majesties a wave and little cheer in passing.

At Wainwright over 12,000 people thronged the station precents and at the smaller towns there were similar crowds, right over the border into Saskatchewan.

Over the border the royal trains passed into the metal tax area. Press, camera and radiomen paid the education tax imposed on their breakfast.

Nobody knows if Saskatchewan is taxing Their Majesties for their meals, or whether their hosts, the government of Canada, is paying the tax.

All the press train knows is that it cheerfully paid Saskatchewan's 2c per pay Saskatchewan's teachers whose salaries virtually disappeared in the drought areas.

Queen Elizabeth Collects Beaver Chips to Take Home to Princesses

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

JASPER, Alta., June 5.—Jasper Park so thrilled Their Majesties during their short stay that the wish expressed on arrival that they would like to stay a weekend, grew to a fortnight on departing.

They were hardly still a minute. Almost immediately on arrival, they drove to Maligne Canyon and inspected it as far as the 'Fifth Bridge' where waiting motors took them back for lunch. Then they set out again as eager as any park visitor to see all they could in the short time allowed them. This time it was to Mt Edith Cavell they went and from the motor road that spirals high above the Athabasca Valley they obtained a wonderful panoramic view of the entire Athabasca Valley.

The Queen gathered bright stones on the Morain at the foot of the glacier for the two Princess Margaret Rose for her rockery.

THEY ARE THRILLED

Following this drive tea was thoroughly enjoyed and then these tireless sightseers, still thrilled with everything they saw, set out to see the beaver at work in small pond near Lake Edith.

There until almost dark Their Majesties and members of their party enjoyed the sylvan solitude. The King, much as you or I would do, sat on a log ad talked not about Empires and matters of State but of Grey Owl and his conservation of the beaver and of game animals of all kinds.

They here collected beaver chips for their two daughters.

Two very human people, very thoughtful of others, appreciative of all the little kindly acts and still interested in a whole hearted way, in every one they meet. A delightful gift of putting everyone at their ease is the universal impression of all those who met and chatted with the King and Queen.

VISITORS THRILLED

Visitors here they with Jasper and its beautiful setting, they almost were distracted from the cheering crowds along their route. Time and again their eyes were irresistably drawn to the surrounding snow mantled peaks of the rockies.

Two very likeable persons left a host of loyal friends behind them in Jasper Park when the King and Queen their Majesties in the old country and it was with hearts almost bursting with pride they sped them on their way, a truly regal pair. He, every inch a King of the commons people and the Queen in tune with even the humblest and quick to respond to every little incident and both visibly refreshed by the keen mountain air.

KING, QUEEN FIND OASIS AT PORTAGE

Their Majesties Attend Divine Service On Sunday Morning

By GEORGE FINLAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man., June 5—In the heart of Manitoba's wheat belt, King George and Queen Elizabeth Sunday found an oasis—a brief interlude of peace, away from the cheering crowds.

For half an hour Their Majesties attended divine service in the Portage La Prairie United Church of which Rev. George W. Abernethy is pastor, a "Dundee lad," who came to Canada 39 years ago to labor in the mission fields of northern Saskatchewan.

EXPRESS THANKS

In the peaceful quiet of the large stone church, the King and Queen expressed their thanks to Mr. Abernethy. Her Majesty describing it as "an oasis," after a crowded week which took them to the Pacific coast and back to the prairies.

Arriving shortly before 10 a.m., Their Majesties were greeted by Mayor H. A. Ireland and then drove to the church where Mr. Abernethy welcomed them. In the crowd of 10,000 were many farm folk from the surrounding wheatlands of the Portage plains.

SHORT SERVICE

For their first visit to a United church in the Dominion, the King and Queen were accompanied by members of the Royal party and in the church were seated 100 citizens of Portage La Prairie—most of them members of the church board. By special Royal command, elders of the Presbyterian church attended. It was a short service in which the pastor thanked Their Majesties saying:

"It is my sincere hope that this hour of praise and prayer will bring to you strength and satisfaction of spirit."

SPOKE ON FAITH

After reading the scripture lesson from Hebrews 11, Mr. Abernethy in his sermon spoke on "Faith," the "urgent and constant necessity for faith in our own personal living and in the conduct of human affairs."

Concluding he said: "I commend Their Majesties to the protection and guidance of Him who has taught us most about faith."

Both the King and Queen joined with the 90-voice choir under the leadership of Clarence Eaglesham, James D. McRae, in the singing of the hymns: "I to the hills will lift mine eyes," an ancient Scottish hymn, and another old favorite, "My faith looks up to Thee." The anthem was "God is a Spirit," by Bennett, sung by the choir.

The informality of the Royal couple—the Queen dressed in a powder blue ensemble with a hat in a double-breasted grey lounge suit—impressed those at the service.

QUEEN SO GRACIOUS

The Queen was so gracious; the King so affable, said Mr. Abernethy.

"His Majesty asked me about the choir, how long I had been in Canada and when I told him it was over regular choir and that it came to the Dominion in 1919, he said: 'How interesting.'"

Her Majesty, said Mr. Abernethy, was interested to learn he had been born in Angus County, Scotland, after the royal tour, waved along the procession route a group of eight men and women from the same county, a small group with "Angus Banners" in the cheering crowd.

MOTHER VERY PROUD

"My mother in Scotland will be very proud when I tell her," the 48-year-old pastor told the Queen.

Leaving the church, Her Majesty, smiling as are has throughout the cross-Canada tour, waved and the King nodded to the crowd along the royal route.

Without formality, Their Majesties boarded the royal train and soon were on route to Winnipeg, 56 miles distant, bound for Eastern Canada and the United States.

It was a perfect western day—bright sunshine and a cloudless sky.

CRIPPLED AGE, INFANCY JOINS HONOR ROYALTY

Crippled age and innocent infancy joined in honoring the King and Queen in Coronation Park Friday.

Cynosure of many eyes was crippled James Langton, 42, 12728 123 street, who trundled up and down before the bleacher stands in a tricycle that was draped with flags. On his knee was 20 months old Jimmie Thomas James, son of the woman at whose home Mr. Langton stays.

Langton was bayoneted through the chest in 1917 while a member of the Imperial army. In 1926, he was hurt paralyzed ever since.

He came to the C.N.R. station about an hour before the Royal train arrived and with his tricycle was in the front row. But then the large crowd began to surge forward, he was swept to one side and he did not see the King and Queen at all.

So he went to the Cenotaph at 4 p.m. and stayed there for more than two hours waiting for Their Majesties to pass. Allowed to wheel himself around in front of the bleachers, Langton got a good look of the King and Queen after all.

Debt Free Improvements

The city is undertaking a very substantial instalment of street improvement this year, with nearly $168,000 worth of paving as a main item in the program. A good part of this paving is by way of fixing up streets on which busses are to replace the street cars, and the cost is provided for in the general appropriation for street railway rehabilitation, chargeable against the earnings of the system. In addition, new paving is to be laid on 109th street, 124th street and the Fort Trail.

There is a balance of $30,000 of 2 per cent money borrowed from the Dominion treasury which will be available to meet part of the outlay. The remainder, the taxpayers will be glad to know, is to be financed out of current revenue, without the creation of new debt, despite the cut in the mill-rate. Edmonton is finding out, as some other cities are, that a good deal of improving can be done without borrowing money. The pity is that demonstrable fact got so little attention in days gone by. We have paid dearly for the folly of ignoring it. Perhaps the city is more likely to stick to the "pay as you go" policy in future on that account.

Why Won't Banks Lend?

The banking committee of the House of Commons had a discussion on the widely interesting question of why banks do not lend money more freely; and came to the unanimous conclusion that one factor is a doubt in the banker's mind of the ability of the would-be borrower to pay back the loan. Doubt as to his ability to repay—not his willingness—it is important to note.

One committee-member recalled that fifty years ago a man who had a reputation for paying his debts could walk into a bank and get a loan without putting up collateral security. That is not so easily done today. Not so much because honesty has slumped as because conditions have changed.

Fifty years ago, everyone believed it profitable to expand production and trade. It was assumed that when the farmer borrowed money to buy stock or the merchant to buy goods there would be a demand for the farm products or the goods which would provide the money to repay the loan with interest. Now bankers, like everyone else, are skeptical about the chance to sell the extra products or the extra goods; hence the fear to lend without security.

And why have conditions changed? Mainly because of international jealousy, avarice, and the fear of war—resulting in militarist tariffs designed to prevent trade expanding and production increasing. The world needs larger production and trade as much as it ever did. There is not too much wheat in the world, or too much of any other necessary commodity. But the supplies cannot be distributed because trade is not allowed to flow freely. Hence while wheat piles up in Canada other products pile up in other countries whose producers would gladly trade them for the wheat if they could.

The world problem is that of clearing the channels of distribution. When that is done production will again expand and trade enlarge; and bank loans for these purposes will be readily obtainable. Meanwhile the nations are living in artificial, man-made hardship; bonusing industrialists so they can buy home-produced products of the farm, and bonusing farmers so they can supply the products; and charging up the bonus-money, under the names of subsidies, fixed prices and relief costs, for the future to worry about. In the words employed as the title of a recent book; "Lunacy Becomes Us".

The Session At Ottawa

Parliament was prorogued Saturday. It met at the middle of January and has thus been in session about four and a half months, a fair average period.

The outstanding item of business was ratification of the trade agreement with the United States, involving substantial reductions in tariffs against both imports into the Dominion and exports to the Republic, and the cancellation of excise taxes on a long list of commodities whose prices bear on the cost of living. This agreement is also complementary to that made between the United States and Great Britain, and the latter could not have been made without readjustments effected by the former. The importance of the new agreement is therefore two-fold. It removes barriers against trade between Canada and the United States and facilitates the removal of trade barriers between that country and Great Britain. Its practical worth has already been shown in the enlarged demand for Canadian cattle in United States and in the cheapening of household requirements imported from that country and from others to which our "most favored nation" agreements apply.

Of signal interest to western Canada directly, and to all Canada indirectly, are the measures embodying a new policy in respect to western agriculture. These provide for an initial guaranteed price of 70 cents for wheat; create a legislative basis for assistance to other branches of farming; and introduce a scheme of acre-bonuses payable to farmers who have poor crops or none. The objective as stated by Mr. Gardiner is a maximum number of farm families, rather than a maximum number of bushels of wheat.

Next in importance is the Central Mortgage Bank legislation, under which, unless the provinces prevent, there will be a uniform scaling down of existing mortgage debts and interest rates, and a fixed maximum limit for interest on future mortgage loans applying in all parts of the Dominion.

The financial statement presented by Mr. Dunning showed a deficit of $55 millions for the year past, and indicated a probable deficit of $60 millions for the present year—unless the threats of war are abated, business picks up and revenue increases in consequence. Despite the prospective deficit there were no increases in general taxation; and because of it, no reductions other than involved in the trade agreement and income tax exemption offered to concerns which use the money to expand their operations and create new employment.

The session was also marked by the launching of a definite and fairly comprehensive plan for strengthening the national defences. The cost is placed at $63 millions, approximately the sum by which the revenue for the year is thought likely to fall below the outlay. Messrs. Hitler et al are thus the gentlemen who have dimmed the outlook for a balanced budget.

The Grads have emerged from another season with the Underwood trophy still in their possession. They had harder going this year than usual, and lost two games in three series, mainly because some of their players were partially disabled by injuries and sickness. But also because the challengers who come up every year from beyond the border are learning to play better basketball. None of this season's challenging teams were easy marks. No other team in the world could have turned back all three of them.

Commenting on an article in the Hamilton Spectator the Manitoba Free Press says: "Down about Hamilton they have been accustomed to think that the Niagara peninsula was the garden of Canada. In matter of size it would answer very well as a garden for the Edmonton district, although much less rich and productive. That this region, capable itself of sustaining some millions of a population, will one day become of great account as a factor in the general prosperity of the Dominion, there is no manner of reason to doubt."

Training Twin Boys

We report, with unrestrained chuckles, on the newest development in the careers of the famous Woods twins of Amsterdam avenue.

As you remember, these are the identical twins, now seven years old, one of whom was taken shortly after birth and given the results of the best scientific ideas about child conditioning, at a modern child study clinic.

The other little boy was allowed to grow up naturally, like any kid on the block.

It turns out now that the scientific twin hates school, likes to play rather than study, and gets marks only little better than average.

The unscientific twin gets "perfect" marks, loves school, is quite an athlete and bosses his scientific brother around.

We know, ha-ha-ha, that this doesn't prove anything, ho-ho-ho, that you need more evidence than this to settle the argument, ha-ha-ha, but, anyway, hee-hee, when we think of those serious-minded professors—ho-ho-ho! We'll have to stop, this is killing us.—New York Post.

So Much Per Head

Last of the Italian troops sent over to help General Franco in the Spanish civil war are being sent home—19,400 of the 40,000 officially admitted as having formed part of Franco's armies. And Italy is counting the cost of this adventure.

Italy counts 3,987 casualties, including 3,132 Italians killed, 2,000 permanently disabled. As long ago as last January Italy admitted losing 85 airplanes in Spain, and 174 Italian airmen are inluded in the list of killed. On its intervention Italy is said to have spent more than half a billion dollars, which Mussolini will "try to get back" in the form of raw materials.

Thus Italy has to count the cost, in the dead and crippled and wounded, in terms of money spent, and perhaps many Italians will be wondering whether the whole thing was worth while. General Franco naturally is grateful to Mussolini and Hitler for their help when he needed help, and apparently he has with them a treaty of friendship of something stronger, but it does not follow that the proud Spaniards therefore are ready to do the bidding of the dictators in all circumstances.—Ottawa Journal.

An Empty Gesture

The securing of a favorable pronouncement by the Senate on the proposed unified management of the railways has been a great objective of the unificationists, and the Senate, with only half the members present, did vote by a small majority in favor of that policy last Friday. There are 96 seats in the second chamber, with a few now vacant, and the vote was 25 to 21. Who that is familiar with the constant activities of those behind the unification campaign will doubt that special efforts were made to ensure the presence, when the vote came, of as many as possible who favored unification? But the favorable vote was recorded. What does it mean? Nothing whatever as far as the government is concerned, and nothing as far as the country is concerned, in view of the votes that were given in the Senate in favor of unification. Having secured their little victory, where do the unificationists go from here? Nowhere.

The senators voting for what would eventually amount to amalgamation of the railways were all Conservatives, but six Conservative senators were opposed. And it is only fair to say that the national Conservative convention last year was emphatically opposed to unification. Hon. R. J. Manion spoke and voted against it in the Commons last Friday. —Winnipeg Free Press.

Unity in Diversity

Perhaps the chief significance of Their Majesties' tour lies in the convincing demonstration it has evoked of the deep-rooted unity existing between the two component peoples of Canada French and English-speaking. This serves to prove more conclusively than ever that the apparent differences which emerge from time to time should be construed solely as superficial manifestations of the underlying pains of growth.

On not a few occasions in the somewhat remote and even in the immediate past forces antipathetic to the British system of conducting national and international business have endeavored to divert from wide channels of Canada interpreted as internal dissension in this Dominion. But they forget that this fredom to air conflicting points of view, this ability to adjust them as circumstances determine from time to time, constitute the solid foundation upon which British democracy rests.

Now that Their Majesties have seen the Dominion from sea to sea, have witnessed for themselves the triumphs of their people over what at times must have seemed almost insuperable obstacles, we feel sure they will take back to Great Britain an unforgettable picture of a Canada steadfastly united, cherishing all the finest cultures and traditions of the Old World, and reinvesting them with all the vigor and virility of the new.—Victoria Times.

Why Not the Railways?

There is a growing enthusiasm about the prospects of the Turner Valley oil field, and the enthusiasm comes not from promoters only. Even the minister of mines for Canada, Hon. T. A. Crerar, is optimistic.

The result of the growing enthusiasm is a renewal of the agitation for a pipeline to the Pacific Coast, so that the oil may be brought to tidewater. No doubt if the oil field develops according to expectations the pipeline will come. But it would be the height of folly to establish another means of transportation until there is unquestioned need and warrant for it.

There are railway lines serving the Turner Valley which are not working to capacity or anything like it, and railways are quite capable of carrying oil. If they can not or will not carry it at rates comparable to those which a pipeline could offer, they will have to accept the consequences. But they should at least have the opportunity.

Canada has made a lot of mistakes in creating transportation systems. She has spent money on canals. Then she has built railroads to take the business away from the canals. New railroads have been constructed to take business from old railroads and motor highways to take the business from both. Now it is proposed to add a pipeline to the complicated picture. When shall we achieve a little common sense?—Vancouver Province.

The Passing Show

By J. B. COWPER

What a happy time of year in which to greet the Royal visitors. Their Majesties have had several samples of Canadian weather on their present tour. Here's a hint to the weatherman to send a real Alberta June day for the Royal welcome—than which glory of clear sky and bright sunshine there is nothing better in all the width of Canada.

Most significant of all of the King's utterances on his Canadian visit was that in which he pledged Britain's word that an enduring peace shall abide between Great Britain and United States. George the Sixth closes the breach made by George the Third. Only a few days before the King declared at Winnipeg that all differences that may arise shall be settled "without force or threat," a royal oak from the Great Park at Windsor was planted in the permanent driveway at the World's Fair outside New York, as a symbol of the unity of understanding between the two great English-speaking nations on both sides of the Atlantic.

A ROYAL OAK IN AMERICA

Speeches in the great Court of Peace preceded the planting. Addresses were given by President-emeritus Angell of Yale University, president of the English Speaking Union; by Hon. John W. Davis, honorary president of the Association; by Major Vincent Price, president of the English Speaking Union of Canada, and by Godfrey Haggard, British Consul-general at New York. All of the speakers stressed the symbolism of this oak seedling, whose roots were nurtured by the rich soil of the royal forest at Windsor, now planted in American soil at the time of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth. Long may it brave the elements, and endure to symbolize the unity of the nations that have given it birth and nurture.

The band of His Majesty's Coldstream Guards is at the World's Fair. It concluded the ceremonies at the Court of Peace by playing the British, Canadian and American national anthems. Then it led the procession to the planting lawn where the final dedication ceremonies took place.

AS ENGLISH OAKS IN COUNTRIES FREE

Tallulah Bankhead, daughter of the American Speaker, and popular actress in England, read a poem, composed for the occasion by Arthur Guiterman. It runs:

Small oak that grew with many an acorn peer
From English earth upon the ancient tree
That harbored England's heir, bencath here,
As English oaks in countries far and free,
Are rooted.
Like their oaks those nations stand.
Those kindred realms of English speech and soul
That nurse no fear nor hate of any land
Or race or creed, but strive to reach the goal
Of peace and justice.
Little oak, grow strong
And flourish like your brothers; safe from blight,
From storm and thunderbolt and every wrong,
Of nature's violence or man's despite,
Lift starward, tower starward, bravely tall,
And may your boughs be broad to shelter all!

All the battles are not won on the field; some are won on the Bourse. Japan is suffering a defeat on the Shanghai exchange, more hurtful and more damaging to prestige than a defeat on the battle-front in China. Part of Japan's strategy was to injure China's warchest and make the Chinese people pay part of Japan's war cost, by forcing issues of Japanese paper money in place of Chinese dollars. It was done in Manchukuo where Japanese yen, artificially valued at 340 to $100 American, are maintained by Army-endorsed Japanese Federal Reserve notes. In China, people holding dollars were ordered to exchange them for a lesser number of Japanese yen, under the fear that the Chinese dollar would be entirely devalued.

JAPAN LOSES A MONEY BATTLE

After the American, British and French called Japanese bluff at Kulangau, the Chinese dollar went to a higher exchange value than the yen, which are now 630 for $100 in U.S. funds. Japan's attempt to force exchange their yen on the fixed basis of 340 yen for 100 American dollars, sending their dollars to Shanghai to be turned back into yen at the rate of 630 for $100. Neat way of nearly doubling one's money!

Now Japan is about lost her yen credit in all the way up the north China coast and into Manchukuo. Japanese warships are trying to stop the bootlegged yen from Shanghai entering Japan. There is the devil to pay over it.

Money is the weapon of war by which Japan is more short. These astute bankers, backed by U.S., British and French funds, who knocked the bottom out of the yen, dealt Japan a worse blow than had they taken a battle from her.

Religion Day By Day

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

A REMEMBERED PRAYER

When I was a little boy, perhaps seven or eight years old, a speaker before our Sunday school in Bridesburg, Philadelphia, offered to send a Bible to any boy or girl who would pray for a year, "Lord, show me myself; Lord, show me Thyself. For Christ's sake, Amen." Seeking the prize, which proved to be an illuminated motto card, I prayed that prayer for a year.

Later, with fuller understanding, it has been a favorite, life-long petition. To know one's self, and one's need and sin, and then to know the forgiving, loving, guiding Father, is just about all of the Christian religion. For to see self clearly is to realize fully the need of God in Jesus Christ.

"Lord, show me myself; Lord, show me Thyself. For Christ's sake. Amen.

Nazi Spy System

Editor, Bulletin: The motion picture, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," reveals the inside workings of the spy system.

The ordinary person has no conception as to what goes on in offices of the dictators and their henchmen, who seek to ferret out a country's most closely guarded secrets.

The extent to which these men will go in order to procure this information will come as a surprise to those who are not acquainted with the methods of power-mad men.

It would be a good thing if every citizen were to see this picture and get a look at what really goes on in Germany, under Hitler.

Queen English-Born

Editor, Bulletin: I have noticed quite a lot in the paper lately about our present Queen Elizabeth being a Scotch woman. The Scotch always like the best and more often than not see that they get it.

But in this instance, are they not a little bit off the track?

The Queen was born at St. Paul's, Waldenbury, Hertfordshire, England. The Countess of Strathmore, her mother, was English. The Earl of Strathmore, her father, was Scotch. Most of the Queen's life was spent at her Highland home, but does this make a Scotch woman?

I have noticed the same thing applies to Mr. Lloyd George; he is often referred to as the "great little Welshman," but he was born at Manchester, England.

History tells us that the Duchess of Kent, the mother of Queen Victoria, came over from Belgium, where her home was and where she was married, to England so that her child would be British-born.

Irish and Proud of It

Editor, Bulletin: It was broadcast that something in the nature of a "disturbance" took place during the King's westward tour.

An unemployed man significantly called "Hesley" threw a letter into the Sovereign's car. An equerry picked it up, the man was arrested, questioned and then released.

As one of the Irish people. British in most of my sentiments, I would feel indescribably indebted to the press if you would let us know the text of that letter.

Mr. Editor, does it ever strike you that the whole creation is going "jitterbug," truth, honesty and straightforwardness are minus quantities now?

I am Irish to the core and I'd rather belong to that race than to any other in the world today, but unfortunately the "parrots" of the human race, the easily impressed, poorly read and the bias-minded have branded all of us as the I.R.A.

It is the Irish who will "laugh up their sleeves" if the contents of the letter are not divulged, since it could not have been incriminating if the expert officers of law and order released him.

"Can I lead a good Christian life in New York on fifteen dollars a week?" a young man asked a well known clergyman.

"My boy," was the reply, "that's all you can do."

Jones was a bootmaker. By hard saving he had managed to send his son Billy to a good school.

One afternoon Billy came into the shop.

"Father," he demanded, "I want a dollar to go to the theatre."

"What!" cried Jones. "Do you realize that I've got to sole and heel about three pairs of shoes to make one dollar profit?"

Billy seated himself in a chair.

"All right, father," he said, "go ahead, but make it snappy."

An old darky approached the minister cautiously and very lightly tapped his shoulder.

"Parson, suh," he said, "Ah wants you all to pray for me. Ah's in a bad way, suh."

"Well, Rastus, what's wrong with you?"

"Suh, Ah's got a floating kidney. Ah has, suh."

"But Rastus," replied the minister, "I can't pray for physical things like that; I only pray for spiritual things."

"You all can't pray for a floating kidney? Then how come you all prayed last Sunday for the loose livers?"

One hundred and ten years ago yesterday (June 4, 1829), Lord Dalhousie presided at a meeting which was called to absorb a rival to the Quebec Literary and Historical society, which he had founded in 1824. Petty personal differences had caused a split, but they were adjusted by Lord Dalhousie and combined in one organization to "conserve historical documents and art treasures in Lower Canada, and especially in and around Quebec."

Dalhousie had come from Nova Scotia with a reputation of one who wanted to encourage education, befriend literature and encourage historians. In 1824 he presided at the organization of the Quebec Literary and Historical society. Its purposes were to "discover and rescue from the unsparing hand of time the records which yet remain of the earliest history of Canada; to preserve while in our power such documents as may be found amid the dust of yet unexplored depositories and which may prove important to general history and to the particular history of this province."

In the century and more which have passed, the L. and H. society has lived up to the ideals of its founders. For many years its transactions were watched with eagerness by all historians. Books now being preserved not only in the provincial library, but also in the British museum and other literary storehouses.

Now the society is reduced to a shadow of its early greatness, the reduction of the English-speaking population has thinned its ranks, but there are still a few who follow the traditions of the founders. The centenary volume of the society, issued in 1924, was regarded as a storehouse of information and had a wide circulation. Owners of its possess a volume which is growing rare and will soon be very valuable.

The society is now lodged in the provincial museum and its records are the mecca for many students of Canadian history.

50,000 MASS IN MELVILLE FOR WELCOME

Vast Throng Refuses To Let Their Majesties Go To Bed

By THOMAS WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

MELVILLE, June 5.—Fifty thousand Saskatchewan folk massed in Melville refused to go home Saturday and let the King and Queen go to bed. In a frenzy of cheering, singing and calling for Their Majesties, Melville and the surrounding country just stayed put when The King and Queen retired to their cars.

The scene beggared description. The crowd was so vast that the floodlights did not reach its fringes and Her Majesty asked that the lights on the platform be turned on the crowd.

Finally small spotlights were utilized and Their Majesties followed the moving finger of light as it moved over the concourse.

REFUSED TO MOVE

The Royal train was to have remained for the night where it stopped, but when Their Majesties re-entered the train, the crowd simply would not go home. A fireworks display was staged, and when it was finished, the crowd refused to move.

Finally the Prime Minister himself took a hand and A. E. Warren, Vice-President of the Canadian National Railways ordered the train moved.

It was discovered that the fine new locomotive had been unhitched and taken off to bed.

CREW RECALLED

The engine crew were recalled and finally the train started to move as though it were leaving Melville for good. Their Majesties had been very generous in the time given to Melville, but when the train began to slowly move out and they heard the cheering crowds, they again came out on the back platform and waved and smiled.

They discovered to their astonishment that the huge crowd they had seen before had a fringe half a mile long, and there were people out there in the dark cheering wildly for them.

Behind the train the crowd closed in and ran after. R.C.M.P. officers clung to the lower part of the back platform bending so they would not obstruct the view of the King and Queen but watching to make sure none of pursuing youngsters was hurt.

The train was run two miles out of town, and the multitude realizing that the show was over went up town and proceeded to celebrate.

CLOCK TURNED BACK

The city authorities with large indulgence turned back the clock from Central Standard time to Mountain time, which had the effect of permitting the beer parlors to remain open an extra hour. They remained open longer but nobody looked at the clock.

Special trains ran late to carry the crowds back home, and all the highways were thronged with busses, trucks and cars.

Melville struck out with a number of original ideas. High above the crowd was a platform on a telegraph pole, and a small searchlight was installed, which shone on Their Majesties wherever they went—until the Queen wanted to see the people and it was turned on the crowd.

HAD HANDS FULL

The R.C.M.P. and the Frontiersmen had their hands full as thousand of cheering youngesters wriggled to get past and get close to The King and Queen. Her Majesty stopped to smile at one rambunctious little burnch and they subsided like a spent wave.

One lady with tears pouring down her cheeks, gazed raptly at The Queen saying over and over again "She's lovely", "She's Lovely". As Their Majesties passed the veterans holding the line knelt down so the children could see over their heads. One burly Frontiersman was on his knees his back to the Queen and his arms outstretched full of enthusiastic wrigglers. Uptown after the Royal train had gone the crowd over-ran everything. Sleeping accommodations was at a premium, even for Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, whose farm is five miles from Melville.

THREE CABINET MINISTERS

This country produced three federal cabinet ministers, Hon. W. R. Motherwell's farm, is at Abernathy, nearby, and the farm of Hon. Charles Dunning is not far away.

Mr. Gardiner was invited to dinner with Their Majesties Saturday as was the Prime Minister.

The Melville demonstration is all the more remarkable by reason of the non-British origin of most of the population. There are substantial German settlements, and many of other nationalities, but all swarmed into Melville to show their allegiance to Their Majesties and set the seal on Their Canadian citizenship.

It was these people from old Europe who were most outspoken in their encomiums of the King and Queen. There will be no divided allegiance here.

The unifying King and his lovely Queen have welded another section of the Canadian people into the Dominion that is Canada and to the Empire that is British.

King Inspects Guard of Honor

—By Bulletin Staff Photographer.

Your Health — By Dr. Frank McCoy

I find there has been a steady increase in the number of letters asking for information about sinus trouble. This might be taken to mean that more cases are developing, but it probably indicates a better diagnosis of sinus trouble. In the old days, many a case of mild chronic sinus inflammation was called headache, catarrh, or neuralgia, but with modern methods of diagnosis such as the X-ray and transillumination, more of these cases are properly diagnosed, with the consequence that more people know with accuracy the name of their difficulty.

The sinus cavities are small air-filled spaces opening off of the inside of the nose, being lined with a continuation of the same mucous membrane which lines the nose itself. The cavities communicate with the interior of the nose through small openings and it is through these openings, that the sinuses drain.

A healthy sinus possesses a high degree of resistance to disease-inducing bacteria as long as it is well drained and well ventilated with air. Apparently, each time you breath, air is drawn into the sinus cavities and this normal ventilation appears to help to keep the cavities healthy.

Because of the sinuses being such near neighbors of the nose, they usually become inflamed by a spreading of an inflammatory process from the nose, which inflammation easily extends by way of the mucous membrane. This explains why most cases of sinus trouble follow the common cold, influenza, or some similar acute infectious process; with the cold being the greatest offender.

The sinuses are involved to some degree in almost all colds, but generally the infection subsides and there are no after-effects. In some cases there may be formed a noticeable acute sinusitis, with considerable pain, perhaps a pronounced swelling about the face, or other forms of distress. However, as a general rule, after a cold the sinuses arrive at the point of spontaneous recovery, with any accumulated mucus draining away through the nose.

Seemingly, as long as the sinus cavities are well drained, well ventilated, and nourished by a healthy blood stream, they either remain normal, or if diseased, return quickly to normal. But when free drainage is interfered with, or when the blood stream is toxic, chronic sinusitis may develop. It is the chronic case of sinus trouble about which we hear the most.

Chronic trouble in a sinus may be unsuspected by the patient, and at the same time be responsible for a lowering of general health. This latter effect is noticed by the manifestation of asthenia as extreme tiredness, loss of strength, lack of normal drive and energy, irritability, and other signs. These symptoms may force the patient to seek relief for what he calls a run down condition. The sinus infection is then located and proper treatment may be started to return the sinus itself to a healthy state. Tomorrow's article will discuss the Treatment of Sinus Trouble. Look for it in this newspaper tomorrow.

Pair Wed In Calgary To Live Here

Claiming the interest of a host of friends in Edmonton, especially in University circles is the marriage which was solemnized in Calgary on Saturday morning when Irene Wilma Dimock, daughter of Mrs. H. Dimock and the late Mr. Dimock of Calgary became the bride of John Edward Duggan, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Duggan of Edmonton.

TO LIVE HERE

On their return from a honeymoon trip in the state of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Duggan will make their home in Edmonton.

The bride is well known in nursing circles in the city, having graduated from the General hospital while Mr. Duggan attended the University of Alberta and is a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

The ceremony took place in St. Mary's Cathedral at the morning hour of 11 o'clock with Rev. Father Lyons officiating.

SHELL PINK NET

Given in marriage by her brother Dr. D. Dimock of Lethbridge, the bride wore a lovely gown in shell pink net over taffeta. Her veil, arranged under a cluster of pearls was shoulder-length and she carried a colonial bouquet of roses, cornflowers and valley lilies.

Miss Marguerite Benoche who attended the bride wore pale yellow net over taffeta with matching hat. She carried a colonial bouquet of mauve sweet peas and talisman roses.

Little Miss Donna Duggan, niece of both the bride and bridegroom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duggan of Calgary was flower girl, frocked in apricot organza and carrying a basket of sweet peas and rosebuds.

Mr. William Duggan of Camrose, cousin of the bridegroom was best man.

WEDDING BREAKFAST

A wedding breakfast was served later at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Duggan. Mrs. Dimock wore a becoming gown in navy flowered chiffon with matching hat. Mrs. Duggan chose a parma violet flowered chiffon gown. Both wore corsage of roses.

For travelling the bride changed to a navy and white print frock with navy hat and top coat in grey tweed.

Tiny Tot Is Not Satisfied With Curtsey

SIOUX LOOKOUT, Ont., June 5.—King George and Queen Elizabeth greeted mine owner, prospector, lumberman and the men of the northern Ontario woods Sunday night with jovial welcoming and smiles, but blond, serious little Miss Sherrill Turner, just a little more than two years old, stole Their Majesties' hearts.

With eight-year-old Betty Lou Rorke, upturned nose topped with freckles, graceful little Sherrill mounted the royal platform. Betty, quiet and dignified in her white dress, presented the Queen with a bouquet of roses and curtsied perfectly, then walked serenely off the platform.

TO OBTAIN PERFECTION

But Sherrill just had to obtain perfection in her curtsy, too. She carried a red rose in her hand, presented it to the King and Queen. The King extended his hand but Sherrill withdrew the gift and curtsied once more.

Still not satisfied, Sherrill curtsied twice again, then, after taking her to the decorated platform rail, Her tiny hand reached forth with the rose which brought laughter from King George and the Queen and left Sherrill with her rose. She still was clinging to it when she left the royal platform.

KEEPS THE ROSE

Sherrill, for a while very silent, finally said the Queen told her "You may keep this rose." The tiny tot is a daughter of W. S. Turner, principal of Sioux Lookout high school.

Betty Lou, daughter of Don Rorke, of Sioux Lookout, was willing to listen to questions, but she refused to admit she was excited or admit anything else with one reply. "Uh huh."

ENJOY THEIR WELCOME

The queen, dressed in a powder blue dress and hat with veil to match, and the King, hatless and wearing a blue suit, seemed to enjoy the enthusiastic welcome. They were smiling and waving as they moved from the rear of the royal train to the platform.

The smiles and waves were greeted with roaring cheers from the crowd gathered on the other pathways in front of the platform and on the grass hillsides. School children from Dryden, Fort Frances, Rainy River and other hamlets waved flags, sang "God Save the King," "The Maple Leaf for Ever," then shouted themselves hoarse.

KERCHIEFS FOR FATHER

Father is a well-dressed man. He's fussy particularly about small accessories as Mother. And he does insist on fine handkerchiefs. For his broad pocket, to hold every day and neat and smooth, he selects a hand-woven French import, very white with hand-rolled hems, of course. He's rather conservative but he likes color, too, so he chooses some colored kerchiefs in shades especially designed to go with men's wear fabrics—rich shades of blue, wine, green and brown and smooth tans and grays. This season deep solid colors, plaids and geometric patterns are much preferred.

Gregor-Coburn Nuptials Held On Saturday

FRAGRANT spring flowers, gladioli, iris, daffodil, snapdragons and flags arranged with taste before the fireplace in the west end home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Coburn on Saturday evening provided the setting for a pretty wedding ceremony when their only daughter, Olive Alexandra Coburn became the bride of Emil Gregor, son of Mr. Andrew Gregor and the late Mrs. Gregor of Edmonton.

Performed at the hour of eight o'clock, the ceremony was conducted by Rev. A. Finnie Marsh, pastor of Central United church.

LOVELY FIGURE

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a lovely picture in her wedding gown of white lace and net over taffeta. Bodice of the frock and the tiny bolero jacket was of lace, while the skirt was net fashioned with bands of matching lace. A veil of white tulle caught closely to her head and flowing softly about her shoulders completed her ensemble and for her flowers she carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Her only ornament was a brilliant clip at the throat of her frock.

Miss Dorothy Taylor who was bridesmaid was charmingly frocked in a toe length gown of turquoise blue taffeta. Fitted bodice, colletage, tiny puffed sleeves and a bouffant skirt sewn here and there with tiny rosettes were the outstanding features of her dress. In her dark hair she wore a bandeau of turquoise net and to match she carried a bouquet of rose colored carnations.

Mr. Norman Burch was groomsman for the bride and Beth Empey played the wedding marches.

During the signing of the register, Miss Eileen Cinder sang very sweetly. Her song was "Because"

BECOMING GOWN OF BLUE

For the occasion of her daughter's marriage, Mrs. A. F. Coburn was dressed seemingly in a gown of powder blue lace. In contrast to her gown was her hat of wheat colored straw, banded with a ribbon of the blue and silk velvet. Her corsage was of roses.

Congratulations of forty-five guests were extended to the happy couple at the reception arranged in the Corona hotel following the ceremony. Supper was served at long tables set with spring flowers and tall tapers.

Seated at the bride's table were Mr. and Mrs. Emil Gregor, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Coburn, Miss M. Taylor, Mr. Norman Burch, and Rev. and Mrs. Marsh. Centred in the tiered wedding cake and adorned with flowers and tall tapers the table was attractive sight.

TOAST TO THE BRIDE

Words of congratulation on behalf of the guests present were voiced by Mr. March later in the evening. Last toast was proposed to the bride by Mr. W. F. Empey, uncle of the bride. This toast marked the culmination of a pretty day made some years ago when the bride was flower girl at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Empey.

Mr. Gregor responded fittingly.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregor have left by motor for California where they will honeymoon for two weeks.

For her going away ensemble, Mrs. Gregor chose a smart dress of fuschia, worn under a topcoat to harmonize. Her hat was of fuschia and her other accessories in black.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Gregor will take up residence in the city.

Anne Sklove Marries On Sunday

Afternoon hour of four o'clock on Sunday was the time chosen for a pretty ceremony whereby two were united in marriage, Anne Sklove, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Sklove and Hyman Kirkpatrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Nelson of Edmonton.

The ceremony took place at the home of Rabbi Isaac Haft, who officiated at the ceremony. Only immediate relatives were present.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a smartly tailored suit in teal blue with accessories in yellow. Her corsage was of talisman roses.

Both the bride and bridegroom were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson will make their home in Edmonton.

Crash Kills Four

SINGAPORE, June 5.—Four men were killed today when a Royal Air Force hydroplane fell into the sea near the Seletar air base.

These Nurses Greeted Their Majesties During Edmonton Sojourn

Visit of Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Edmonton on Friday probably meant as much or more to that great throng of Edmonton citizens, valiant men and women who served in the army of His Majesty, the late King George V, father of the present king, during the Great War, 1914-1918, as to any of the citizens who acclaimed Their Majesties during their all too short stop in Edmonton. Pictured here are five members of the Overseas Nursing Sisters' Association, of the number who were at the Cenotaph on Friday to greet Their Maejsties as they drove slowly past. All of these women, and the many more who were present in active service in France and Belgium during the Great War. They are, pictured from left to right, Miss Mary Daley, at present on the Edmonton Public school staff, who served with the Imperials overseas; Mrs. Arnold Taylor, who served with British Red Cross; Mrs. Pat meaney, who served in Canadian Army Medical Corps, who is now the nurse at the Indian reservation at Winterburn; Mrs. Simpson, of this city, and Mrs. J. A. Sandilands, also of Edmonton, who also saw active service. On duty during the day were others of the association, Mrs. John Turner, Mrs. Matthew Berry, Mrs. R. F. Nichols, Miss I. D. Robinson, Mrs. C. E. McMaster, Mrs. Michie, Mrs. Ingles of Wetaskiwin, and Miss C. McKay. Mrs. A. C. Rankin of this city is president of the unit in Edmonton, and Mrs. C. E. McManus is secretary.

Nanny's Quads

WINDSOR, Ont., June 5.—H. M. Peacock's nanny goat has given birth to four kids. The unusual multiple birth is the more notable by the fact that three of the kids are white, and one brown.

Mrs. Spencer Is Renamed Head Of N.C.W.

HAMILTON, Ont., June 5.—Mrs. George O. Spencer of Moncton, N. B., told the National Council of Women Saturday, after being re-elected president, of her experiences as delegate to the international conventions where she spoke on friendly relations between Canada and the United States.

Delegates from European countries could scarcely believe the extent of the peace and harmony she described as the international gathering of women, Mrs. Spencer said.

"I said that delphiniums were our only weapon of defence, not only bombs," Mrs. Spencer recounted. "Some of them came to me later with tears in their eyes, seeking to know more about Canada and the United States."

OFFICERS

The following officers besides Mrs. Spencer were named as the national Council's annual meeting ended: Vice president Mrs. Edgar Hardy, Ottawa, Mrs. Paul Smith, M.L.A., Saskatoon; Mrs. Robert C. Marshall, Toronto, Mrs. Frederick Ethington, Kingston, Ont., Mrs. Arthur Hamilton, Mrs. W. T. Allison, Winnipeg, and Dr. Olga Jardine, Victoria.

Varied Program Of Activities Keeps Royal Princesses Busy

LONDON, June 5.—While the King and Queen are touring Canada 13-year-old Princess Elizabeth and eight-year-old Princess Margaret Rose are leading a more normal life in their unaccustomed "independence."

Their Majesties' six weeks visit to North America is giving the young princesses a taste of life outside the Royal residences under the supervision of Queen Mary.

DURING THE WEEK

The princesses are at Buckingham Palace on weekdays in their "nursery suite" on the third floor they have daily lessons, entertain their young friends, and write installments of the long letters they are sending to their parents by every mail.

Snapshots and reels of film that Princess Elizabeth makes with the movie camera "Uncle Edward" (the Duke of Windsor) sent her for her birthday last month also are being dispatched in weekly batches.

HAVE SWIMMING LESSONS

The girls are getting a lot of fun out of their weekly swimming lessons in the outdoor pool in the Royal lodge at Windsor. Elizabeth is a good swimmer, and has earned her girl scout life-saving badge.

Each Frida ythe princesses go by automobile to Royal Lodge. The girls come back to London Monday mornings to start the week's work—daily lessons in English, mathematics, history, geography and other subjects. On Wednesday afternoon schoolroom in Buckingham palace is a big map on which the Princesses make every stage of the Royal trip across Canada with tiny flags. Before he sailed for Canada May 6 the King showed his daughters the route he and the Queen were to follow.

In complete charge of princesses while the King and Queen are away is Mrs. Knight who heads the palace nursery staff. She formerly was Queen Elizabeth's nurse.

Elizabeth and Margaret always have called Mrs. Knight "Allah," the name Elizabeth invented when she lisped her first baby sentences. Accompanying the Princesses on most of their jaunts is Lady Helen Graham, one of Queen Elizabeth's "women of the bedchamber." Also playing a big part is Marion Crawford, the Scottish governess who has charge of the girls' daily lessons.

The day after Their Majesties sailed for Canada the Princesses paid a long visit to Queen Mary at Marlborough House. In the morning the girls went to church with their grandmother in the Queen's chapel at St. James' Palace across the street. After tea Queen Mary took them to the summer exhibition of the Royal Academy.

During the past two years Queen Mary has taken the Princesses on an "educational" trip every Monday afternoon on a three-hour jaunt in the city. These visits are designed to give Elizabeth and Margaret Rose a broad acquaintance with English life.

RIVER TRIP

On the first Monday after their parents sailed, Queen Mary took the Princesses on a three-hour trip on the River Thames, which included visits to the docks and warehouses along the "Pool of London" where most of the United Kingdom's import and export trade is handled.

At the Port Authorities headquarters the Princesses were given working models of the Mauretania, the recently completed 32,000-ton Cunard-White Star liner which could call all the 4,200 square miles of Jasper National Park their garden.

ASKS QUESTIONS

Queen Elizabeth delayed a mountain expedition while she asked questions about life in a Rocky Mountain luxury cottage.

She learned how her food was brought in heated push carts from a central kitchen and placed in electrically-heated cabinets until she was ready for it; how all the gadgets in the place worked, and was told that the red gold telephone would connect her with Buckingham Palace where her daughters, Princess Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, are awaiting her return to England.

The only alteration in the telephone instrument was the removal of the disc of the number dial. A picture of a big horned sheep, sign of the trail riders of the Canadian Rockies, had replaced the disc.

I.O.D.E. Unit Entertains At Dancing

GAIETY which marked the Royal visit to Edmonton was still in evidence on Saturday evening, and guests attending the flannel dance of the Prince Edward of Kent Chapter, I.O.D.E., found pleasure in dancing in a ballroom which the evening before had been graced by the presence of Their Majesties.

130 GUESTS

Approximately 250 guests attended the annual party of the Chapter in the Macdonald hotel, where the supper tables were centred with spring blossoms and candles.

CALGARY WOMAN IS NAMED HEAD OF U.C.T. AID

MOOSE JAW, June 5—Mrs. Jeanette Wright, Calgary, was named president of the ladies auxiliary to the United Commercial Travellers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, at convention Saturday. Other officers included grand page, Sister Nellie Christianson, Lethbridge; grand trade organist, Sister Phenie Johnson, Calgary. A gift of silver was presented Grand Councillor Jeanette Wright by the Calgary auxiliary.

Painting To Be Given To Museum

A painting by Miss Glenna Miller was chosen by the Edmonton Art Club as the best picture to offer the Edmonton Museum of Arts for its permanent collection at a recent meeting of the society in the Cottage tea room.

A novel feature of the meeting was the auctioning of the club's furnishings, which had been used at a rental studio some time ago. Mr. H. E. Jones acted as auctioneer.

During the evening an informal criticism of several member's pictures took place.

Miss H. Vincent Foster, presided, and others present were Mrs. S. W. Kaufman, Mrs. F. W. Lowle, Mrs. A. Card, Miss Mary Hunter, Miss M. Cruickshank, Miss Glenna Miller, Miss Mary Mercer, Mr. H. E. Jones, Mr. Robert Campbell, Mr. Gordon Sinclair, Mr. F. H. Norbury, Mr. A. Garner, Mr. George Gates, Mr. G. Garner, Mr. Giles Clarke and Mr. A. Cartmell.

Lydia Gaebel Is Bride of Thomas Visser

St. Paul's Anglican church at Jasper was the setting for a pretty wedding quite recently when Lydia Phillipine Gaebel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Gaebel became the bride of Mr. Thomas Visser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Visser, also of Edmonton. The wedding was arranged on the 40th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Gaebel, parents of the bride.

Rev. Mr. Shultz officiated at the ceremony, and the wedding marches were played by Mrs. E. Pennibecker. During the signing of the register Mr. G. Bailey sang "Because".

EMBROIDERED NET

Embroidered white net fashioned the lovely bridal gown, made with a very full skirt, tucked bodice and short sleeves. The bride wore a small halo hat from which fell a chapel veil and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Peggy Bailey attended the bride as matron of honor, wearing for the occasion salmon pink organdy, fashioned with a very full skirt, gathered bodice and short sleeves. She wore a small cap of blue flowers, blue net gloves and carried a bouquet of blue and salmon pink snapdragons.

Miss Carol Hinchey, acting as bridesmaid chose a beautiful frock in mauve net over printed yellow taffeta. Her very full skirt was gathered at the waistline and the neckline was featured by a Peter Pan collar. She wore a little cap of yellow flowers, mauve net gloves and carried a bouquet of yellow and mauve snapdragons.

Mr. Elmer Gaebel, brother of the bride, was best man.

Reception to over 80 guests was arranged following the ceremony at the Chateau Jasper on Patricia street. To receive her guests, Mrs. Gaebel chose a printed silk frock in rust tones. She wore a corsage to match and corsage of yellow roses.

Mrs. Visser, mother of the bridegroom was becomingly dressed in navy silk with accessories in white and corsage of red roses.

Lilacs and white tapers graced the bride's table which was centred by a three tiered wedding cake. Toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. A. Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Visser will make their home at Jasper Place.

KEEP SLIPCOVERS FRESH

If you have been wise in the selection of slipcovers, you will need to use no special formula for laundering. Don't allow dust and dirt to become ingrained. Frequent brushing of slightly soiled areas is lots easier on both you and the fabric than strenuous dislodging of deep-seated soil. Use a mild wash and changing once or twice during washing, rinse thoroughly and dry in the shade. Press, taking particular care on cordings, bindings and pleats.

Pope Receives British Envoy To The Holy See

VATICAN CITY, June 5—Pope Pius today received the British minister to the holy see, Francis Osborne, and informed Vatican sources said they had an important conference bearing on the Pontiff's efforts on behalf of peace.

While there was no official information, a reliable informant said His Holiness had sent notes to Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Poland dealing with specific problems threatening peace.

Vatican circles attached particular importance to the reported notes to Britain and France. Some observers believed these might have touched on Anglo-French negotiations with Russia for a mutual assistance agreement.

Raising A Family

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Betty took forty grains of headache pills and went to school. Then she became ill, walked up and told the teacher. The teacher gave her something at once and called the doctor.

O. R. Barton

The child herself called her father on the telephone a n d told him the whole story. He said, "Well, Betty, I was all sorts of a darn fool when I was your age, but I never went completely nuts. You aren't the only one concerned in this You've no business scaring your teacher into fits and worrying me. I can't tell your mother. It wasn't your life you were fooling with but hers. How do you like that?"

Why did Betty do such a thing? She is not an "exceptional" child or in any way a deviate. She is a completely normal, sun-type type with all the natural attributes of any girl of twelve.

She may have known that the medicine would help her when she was ill. Then she may have decided that ten times as much as usual would make her feel very fine. That is one explanation.

Or she may have had some problem she could not face. She did not think of death but perhaps she thought she could go to sleep and forget everything, just as she did when she had grippe and the medicine had had such a salubrious effect.

MAY HAVE BEEN NO REASON AT ALL

It may have been that her father was going away on a business trip next day and she thought she could keep him home. Or that she was lonely and wanted to be fussed over.

The family won't mention it again. They are too wise for that. She is as sorry as anyone that she was so foolish. She gave no explanation. Maybe she hadn't any. I think that a growing girl does many things impulsively that she can't explain.

What To Do

The question of whether the groom should kiss the bride at the altar has brought about an argument which so far has not been satisfactorily settled. Inasmuch as I

The maximum legal rate at which moneylenders and husband are permitted to charge is 12 per cent, the highest rate of any country in the world.

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

The hotter the weather, the hotter the food. That's a Mexican recipe for keeping cool.

TAMALE PIE

(Serves 4 to 6)

One quart boiling water, 1 cup cornmeal, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ pound salt pork, 1½ pounds ground round steak, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons chili powder, 1 teaspoon grated onion, ¼ cup cracker crumbs.

To boiling salted water, slowly add cornmeal. Stir until mixture begins to thicken. Simmer over hot water while preparing the meat.

Have salt pork and round steak ground together. Combine with salt, onion and chili powder. (Any good grocery carries chili powder).

Grease a baking dish. Smooth half of the cornmeal mush over the bottom. Then add the meat mixture, and cover with remaining mush. Over the top sprinkle the cracker crumbs and dot with butter. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 1 hour. Be sure the mush is cooked but not too stiff. The pie should be reasonably moist.

BARBECUED HAMBURGERS

(Makes about 12)

Two pounds Hamburgers, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon minced garlic, ¾ teaspoon celery salt, ¼ teaspoon black pepper.

Combine all the ingredients. Shape into flat patties about 5 inches wide and ¼ inch thick. Fry slowly in a little fat until well browned on both sides, turning frequently. Just before done cover with half a bun. This process steams the bun. Toast the other half of the bun and butter it, then add cooked Hamburger. Everyone likes this kind of hot food in summer.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Strawberries, dry cereal, raisin toast, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Cold meat, coffee, hamburgers, applesauce, drop cookies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Tamale pie, lettuce-tomato-cucumber salad, fresh cherry tarts, coffee, milk.

am going to be married in the near future I would very much appreciate your advice.

MASCULINE READER.

Answer—Because you are only one of many young men who have asked the same question I am making my reply to your letter through this column so it will be helpful to other prospective bridegrooms who are in the same quandary. To kiss or not to kiss the bride at the altar is really a personal matter and should be settled before the wedding day by the parties concerned. As a word of advice, however, any extensive demonstration of affection is never made in public by persons of refinement. Too often bridal couples destroy the dignity of the marriage ceremony by a Hollywood kiss at the altar. The clergyman's congratulation is an entirely fitting climax.

Dorothy Dix Says:

Why is it that wives so seldom realize that breakfast is more than a meal? In reality it is the issue which determines the success or failure of their marriages, for it is the psychological moment in which they bind their husbands to them with hoops of steel or else lose them.

Yet most women regard breakfast as a chore instead of an opportunity. The very wives who put themselves up for dinner and dress their tables up with flowers and try to appear glamorous in their husbands' eyes will slap down any sort of half-cooked food on their breakfast tables and not even take the trouble to wash the cold cream off of their faces.

Worse still, they flavor the meal with temper and complaints and reproaches. If they have any bad news to spill, such as Mother is coming for a long visit, or that the butcher is clamoring for his money, or that the doctor says little Johnny must have his adenoids out, or that we have to have new shoes, they take that time to do it when their husbands are in the jittery and pessimistic frame of mind with which most of us salute the morning. The results are the family spats that wreck homes and swell the divorce statistics.

There are many reasons why a wife should put her best foot foremost at breakfast. One is that if she pities her husband with good food and makes breakfast a pleasant, cheerful function she increases his efficiency and preserves his health.

Another reason why wives should be at their best at breakfast is because the picture that a man has of the Little Woman across the breakfast table is one he carries with him all day in his mind. It is either a close-up of a woman who is clean and spick and span and jolly and good-natured or a slob in curling pins and a soiled negligee and a temper. No wife can afford to forget that her husband goes from her to work with business girls who are trim and tidy and groomed to their toe nails.

And, finally, a wife should bear in mind that the breakfast table is the most dangerous of all places at which to stage a quarrel. It gives a husband all day in which to mull over the mean things his wife has said to him and to get madder and madder over her unjust accusations and unreasonable attitude.

I certainly urge all young men and women starting out in married life to make breakfast a meal to be enjoyed and not endured.

MARY FRANKLIN, society editor.
DUKE MARTIN, suave night club gangster.
JANICE FRENCH, society deb.
JIM SHIRLEY, playboy.

Yesterday: Jack Burden strikes Martin. Then Mary rushes from the night club with Mary Franklin in mad pursuit. She changes cabs when an officer hails her for speeding.

CHAPTER XXI

DUKE MARTIN'S skyscraper apartment included one of the most entrancing after dark views in New York. This evening, when Bill Condon let Clem and Martin in, the heavy mauve silk curtains which were usually drawn across the tall windows had been pulled back, revealing a star-spangled strip of sky and city.

"I've never seen anything half so beautiful," exclaimed Clem.

Her eyes were shining, her cheeks were flushed and her hair even more disordered than it had been at the Dove.

She clutched her long white ermine wrap about her shoulders. "I can understand jumping from this window on such a night, plunging into eternity."

"Drink this and you won't feel like that," said the Duke. He strolled slowly across to Clem, handed her a cocktail and put his arm about her waist.

Tears began to run down her cheeks.

"I don't know why I'm crying," she said hysterically, Martin laughed out loud.

"What's the matter?" she asked sharply.

"Women. The way they take love. Some men like it. Some don't. I laugh. Some want to hit you."

He dropped her arm suddenly and walked away.

She rested her cocktail glass on a table and moved quickly over to him.

"I'm sorry," she babbled. "I guess I was crying because I was happy."

He studied her face, his eyes cold and ruthless, then he seized her in his arms.

He covered her mouth with kisses. He was no longer civilized. "By God, I'll always keep you under heel."

She could feel his hot lips on her throat, hear his heart as it beat against her heart and be conscious that his breath with its heady fragrance of Scotch whiskey and Havana cigars, was mingling with her breath.

Slowly she relaxed in his arms, her eyes brimming. Behind him Bill Condon watched from the doorway, vanishing as she spoke.

"You do love me," she said, like a little bird paralyzed by the fascination of a snake.

He pushed her away. "I've never loved anyone. A fellow's a fool if he lets himself fall for one. See what an idiot Burden made of himself tonight. He's lost his best widget. But you gotta keep them in their place."

She was in a frenzy now, "What do you want to do, drop me?" she cried. "Get it over with?" she held him helplessly with her little fists, "before I kick you."

He reached for a cigarette. "You can't get away from me and you know it." His face was twisted and savage. "By this time you'd better savvy this foo—my friendship comes high."

Her face whitened. "What do you mean?"

"Well, your Dad has money and you have money." His voice took on a soft, purring quality. "I'd like to open up a little casino at Palm Beach this winter."

She began to cry, then wiped her eyes to stare at him with sudden horror. "And if we don't help you?"

His voice grew hard and cold again. "There are always windows to jump from."

"Or rivers to jump in," she finished quietly.

"Meanwhile," he said, drawing her close to him again, "there is the present. You've had your warning and you'd better take it. I guess you know what to expect."

"I hate you!" she screamed, snatching herself away from him. "And I have more courage than Janice French!"

With that she ran madly down the hall to the bedroom. Reaching swiftly back, Martin pressed a button on the side wall. There was a sudden sound of a door closing.

On the street below a blue coupe came to an abrupt stop in front of the Martin apartment building.

"Parking long, sir?" inquired the doorman, tipping his cap as Jack lurched out.

"No. Keep it there. I'll be right back."

"Cock-eyed, if you ask me," said the doorman later to the policeman on the beat.

The doorman, his huge figure gaudily decked out in maroon and gold braid, paced dourly back and forth in front of the elaborate entrance. His back was turned as Mary tumbled into the building. An elevator boy looked at her inquiringly.

"Mr. Martin's apartment," she said excitedly.

The boy followed her into the car, shut the door but did not press the lever button.

"Your name?"

Haunted by Jack's white face, she brazened the situation out.

"Certainly."

The boy, still suspicious, started the elevator. "Must be having another drunken party up there," he remarked as the car dawdled upward.

"I'm a friend of Mr. Martin," she explained. "He's—he's—he's expecting me. Perhaps I'd better tell him that you like to ask questions."

She saw by his frightened eyes that he was convinced.

"Sorry being curious, ma'am. Forty-five-O-one—first to your right."

The door of 4501 was ajar. Mary listened. Only the wind was howling of the wind. She pushed the door open wider, her head bent forward to catch warning noises. Still the silence.

Slowly, cautiously, she tip-toed in. Her impulse was to run. She imagined she heard a quiet step behind her. Her breath came in gasps. She paused. No sound. Just the wind pounding against the wall. The hall was dark but a bright light, cast a reflected glow from the living room. Exerting all the will power she had, Mary moved deliberately down the hall to the living room.

With a sharp cry she stopped suddenly. There in the middle of the great living room floor, sprawled the body of Duke Martin. She knelt beside him. He was lying face downward. A small circle of blood stained the thick carpet. She reached and took a hand to turn the body over, then as quickly jerked it back. Fingerprints. Murder. She stared down at the hand. Fingerprints her feet slightly sick to see the blood still oozing from Martin's temple. He'd evidently died quickly a short while. There was powder marks.

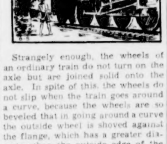

Mary straightened up. What a story! She started toward the telephone, then ran down the hall, closed the front door and hurried, fear forgotten in the excitement, into a room to room, looking for she knew not what or whom.

Returning to the living room she stared once more at Martin, then glanced about the rest of the room, her eyes widening as they fell on a gleaming, sequined square tossed in a chair. She stumbled toward it. Clem's evening bag! On the table by it lay a receipted bill. Frantically she reached for the telephone and dialed the Cazette's number.

"Give me the City Desk," she screamed. "Hello, City Desk. Here's a tip. Duke Martin has just been killed in his apartment . . ."

Mary banged up the receiver as an excited voice began questioning her. Frantically reaching for the typewriter, she stuffed in Clem's evening bag, then raced down the hall and out, carrying the bag with her.

Strangely enough, the wheels of an ordinary train do not turn on the axle but are pivoted solid onto the axle. In spite of this, the wheels do not slip when the train goes around a curve, because the wheels are so beveled that in going around a curve the outside wheel is shoved against the flange, which has a greater distance than the outside edge of the wheel. Thus the outside wheel travels farther than the inside wheel, but it is greater in diameter at that time.

TEA TOWELS
Design No. 4033

Tea towels are pretty presents things as a general rule, but since they are very necessary to any kitchen, why not have them as attractive as possible? These cute little designs will help you, you will enjoy working them too. The pattern includes enough designs for seven towels which should be a substantial addition to your supply of linen—A grand idea for a shower present, too, don't you think?

The pattern includes transfer sheet of the designs, together with stitch details and color charts.

Send 15 cents for this pattern to Edmonton Bulletin, Needlework Department, Edmonton, Alberta.

New Permanent Wave Desirable in Summer

By ALICIA HART

Unless your hair is naturally curly or happens to look well when worn quite straight, an important aid to your peace of mind during summer months is a new permanent wave. And one way to be sure that the wave will be as you hope is to make sure that your hair is in proper condition.

It's an excellent idea to go in for reconditioning treatments for at least three weeks before you get a new permanent. Brush your hair every single night, use a tonic to correct whatever scalp defects you happen to have, and use it according to directions; have, if possible, some kind of week scalp treatment.

HOT OIL BEST FOR DRY HAIR

For dry hair, hot oil treatment cannot be beaten. Simply rub hot olive oil into your scalp and the dry ends of hair, then wring a towel out in very hot water and wrap it around your hair. The steam will help to drive the oil into your scalp. When the towel has cooled, again dip it in hot water, wring as dry as possible, wrap it around your head, then cover with a dry towel for a few moments.

Now place your elbows on a table, put your head in your hands and massage your scalp for three or four minutes. Afterward, shampoo in the usual manner, using a liquid shampoo, of course, and rinsing thoroughly.

For exceptionally oily hair, a pine tar or a balsam oil shampoo often is recommended. There are plenty of prepared shampoos which contain quantities of pine tar. And it is possible to buy balsam oil for wires.

Minute Make-Ups

Now is the time to decide whether to tan or not to tan this summer. If you want to stay lily white, start using your tan preventive cream right away, before the brilliant sun has a chance to play tricks on you. Use it lavishly. And renew the application frequently.

use at home. To use it, simply rinse hair with hot water, pour on the oil, work it into scalp and hair for several minutes, then rinse out. Naturally, the rinsing requires time and patience. Thick balsam oil does not rinse out as easily or as quickly as soap.

A recent increase in telegraph business is supposed to indicate business improvement. That's hanging a big prediction on a few wires.

THIS SEVENTY-YEAR-OLD MAN'S SUFFERING GONE! THANKS MOSBY'S TONIC

Mr. Geo. Knight, One of the West's Pioneer Residents, had Sluggish Kidneys—Pains in His Back and Legs—Bowels Badly Constipated—Now He Says: "Mosby's Tonic Has Relieved Me. This Medicine is Splendid!"

MR. GEORGE KNIGHT, a Wide-Known 70-Year-Old Citizen, Who says: I Am Surprised at MOSBY'S TONIC! It Is a Splendid Medicine and I Gladly Endorse It."

"Oh! How my sluggish kidneys hurt me! The backache, the sharp pains. The stiffness and soreness. And all night long my sleep was disturbed, due to this kidney sluggishness I couldn't rest. But since I got MOSBY'S TONIC my sluggish-acting kidneys are relieved. Now I can sleep. Backache relieved. Here is a Splendid Medicine!"

That is what thousands of people here in Edmonton and vicinity are saying about MOSBY'S TONIC, the "New Mixture of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Agents," now being introduced to crowds daily in this city by a Special Mosby Tonic Representative, known as The MOSBY TONIC Man, at The Army and Navy Dept. Store, Edmonton.

And remember—MOSBY'S TONIC not only helps Nature relieve weak, sluggish kidneys but also clears gas and bloat from stomach, cleanses bowels, invigorates the liver action, acts to relieve pains of rheumatic and neuritic troubles caused by contaminated system. It accomplishes several things in the body at the Same Time.

For instance, just a few days ago, Mr. George Knight, of 440 Elgin Ave., Winnipeg, Man., made the following statement. Mr. Knight, who is 70 years of age, has been a resident of the West all his life. He has friends and acquaintances throughout this entire section. This citizen's testimonial, praising Mosby's Tonic, follows:

Sharp Back Pains Due to Sluggish Kidneys

"I am a man who takes exercise and is a healthy, active life, but about a year ago I began having trouble with my kidneys, which kept getting worse and worse," said Mr. Knight. "Finally I got so bad that I had sharp pains in my back almost CONTINUALLY. Also had aches and pains in my legs which felt like rheumatism. I certainly suffered. Also my bowels were badly constipated, and I had to take all kinds of laxatives. I guess my blood-stream was simply full of poisons.

Surprised at Relief Mosby's Tonic Gave

"I heard about Mosby's Tonic. In fact, people seemed to be praising it right and left, so I decided to start taking it, and I am Simply Surprised at the Results. My kidneys are relieved and the pains in my back are gone now. Also, those rheumatic pains in my legs are gone. And another thing—I want to say that this medicine has the finest action on a person's bowels of anything I have ever had in life. It seemed to cleanse all the poisons out of my system, and it did it quickly, too! I have taken only 2 bottles, and I get all of this relief. I can't say enough for Mosby's Tonic. It is Splendid!"

A Special Mosby's Tonic Representative, known as The MOSBY TONIC Man, is now at The ARMY and NAVY DEPT. STORE, Edmonton, daily meeting crowds of customers introducing and explaining this New Compound. I

According To Culbertson

For a long time I have been preaching on the iniquities of weak overcalls and, gratifying enough, I believe that the average player has tightened up in this department and that rarely sticks out his neck, except at the lower levels. Occasionally, however, I still meet an oldtimer who never has been able to get the overcalling urge out of his system and, on such occasions, it does not surprise me to witness such a debacle as in the following hand.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 Heart	1 Spade	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

South, the old auction player, probably proceeded on the fixed theory that a mere one bid could not be jumped on by the opponents or, if it were, that he always would be able to collect enough tricks to make it a paying sacrifice. How wrong he was! Even though he found an ace in the dummy, the penalty he paid was not only disproportionate but disappointing as well, and was hardly conducive to cordial relations with his partner.

West opened the singleton heart and, when dummy ducked, East forced declarer to win the trick on spot. Declarer went into quite a huddle trying to figure out a propitious line of play, and I can't say that I blame him, for I myself don't know just how to proceed with a mess such as this one, but fortunately I do not often find myself in such contracts.) Probably with the reflection that "a trick was a trick," declarer led the deuce of spades and, when West covered with the queen, won with the ace. Perhaps he had thought of voiding his own hand of clubs and ruffing, but the opponents would continue the suit, thereby letting him get in some of his winners. Perhaps, but I do not see his idea he was doomed to disappointment. On a club return from dummy East signalled with the diamond eight and West, after inspecting the ten spot, shifted to the diamond jack. Declarer hoped for three more diamond tricks but these did not cover with dummy's queen, but, on a diamond continuation by West, East won with the king and cashed the king and queen of hearts. West discarded his last diamond and one club and now, when East led the fourth diamond ace, declarer was in a pitiful spot. He chose to discard his last heart—not that it made much difference. East now played another diamond and declarer desperately ruffed with the spade nine. Had he ruffed with a lower spade, West could have overruffed with the eight. West overruffed with the spade jack and East led off with a club. East ruffed with the queen, while declarer impotently had to underruff. The spade king was a dead duck and East could lead any card in his hand. West has the A-8 of trumps over declarer's 10-7 and the last two tricks inevitably had to go to the defenders. Thus, declarer had made precisely two tricks—the two aces—on his atrocious overcall, and even though it had been in the one level, he had to pay a 300 point

Blind Vets Enjoy Procession

—By Bulletin Staff Photographer.

OLE HOGAN CHARLES HITCHCOCK

How did the Royal Progress Friday affect two blind war veterans who had seats of honor in the bleachers near the Cenotaph for the procession? "Great," is the answered response of Charles Hitchcock, of Beverly, and Ole Hogan, 11820 95 street, who said they got a "great kick" out of the Royal Progress even though they could not see it. Mrs. Hitchcock described the drive of the King and Queen past the Cenotaph for her blind husband, while Frank L. Brown, 11737 91 street, performed a similar function for Mr. Hogan. Hitchcock lost his eyesight due to shrapnel suffered in the historic attack upon Cambrai in the last hundred days of the war in which Canadian forces played so decisive a part. Sixty-one-year-old Ole Hogan, who also fought in the South African War, saw service overseas in the Great War for four years and three months, and was blinded due to action he participated in while in the trenches.

Broomhall

The past week witnessed improved weather and crop conditions over large parts of the northern and the southern hemisphere. In North America widespread rains and moderating temperatures were exceptionally favorable for crops generally and crop advices at the close of the week were more optimistic. In the Argentine frequent rains have relieved the droughty condition which had prevailed for the better part of the past two months and growers are now actively engaged in field work in an effort to make up for the delays necessitated by the earlier dryness. European crops which have been held up over large areas by cold weather have been benefitted by sunshine and beneficial rains over wide areas, although in a few sections rainfall has been excessive and caused some damage.

KIDS STEAL SASKATOON'S ROYAL SHOW

SASKATOON, June 5. — Kids stole the show in Saskatoon Saturday with their merry faces, waving hands and wide smiles as The King and Queen drove by.

Before Their Majesties left the station, 700 specially chosen collegiate girls in flag formation cheered and sang as Their Majesties received the city's officials on the station platform.

Along the route, 1,200 children, who had slept on blankets and eaten only hot dogs and picnic lunches since Friday when they arrived in busloads from outlying points, made their voices heard amid the crowds.

But when the Royal car reached the grounds of the University, the children broke all bounds. Standing in orderly manner against the curbs, they lifted their beaming faces and yelled. Tiny tots in freshly-ironed print frocks, little boys in white blouses and short knickers, convent girls, Brownies, Guides and Scouts and little Indian children alike joined in a mass burst of enthusiasm that resounded for more than 15 minutes as Their Majesties smiled and waved greetings.

U.S. Estimates Farmer Income

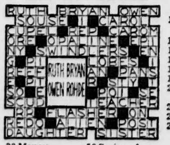

WASHINGTON, June 5 — The bureau of agricultural economics estimated today that United States farmers had a gross income in 1938 of $9,220,000,000 from farm production and government subsidies. This compared with $10,350,000,000 estimated for 1937.

PREMIER TELLS IMPRESSIONS ROYAL VISIT

Spontaneity Outstanding Feature—Welcome Refutes Secession Talk

Outstanding feature of the Edmonton welcome to Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth "was the spontaneity of it all," Premier William Aberhart declared in commenting on the Royal visit, in the course of the Edmonton Prophetic Bible Conference service at the Strand theatre on Sunday. The welcome, he said, would dispel any suggestions that Alberta would secede from the Dominion.

"Speaking of impressions of the visit of Their Majesties to the city of Edmonton, I am sure that everyone will agree that the King and Queen both left a very lasting impression upon the thousands and hundreds of thousands that crowded the streets of the city of Edmonton on Friday. Their Majesties were so gracious and kind, so genial and pleasant mannered that all the

The Inquiring Reporter

Recent fatalities due to submarine disasters caught the attention of The Bulletin's Inquiring Reporter. Deeply intrested in the problem of submarine safety, he asked citizens for their opinions on the question. Here are the answers:

BILL CARTER, rancher: I think that more care should be taken in the future when testing out new submarines. The navy should be ready to start rescue work immediately if anything goes wrong. It seems to me that the Admiralty was very lax in the recent Thetis tragedy. If they had taken the precaution to have ships at hand to start rescue work at once in the submarine failed to come to the surface, in all probability no lives would have been lost.

OSBORNE SHEDDY, salesman: It seems to me that a great deal of attention should be given to the problem. I thing that more precautions should be taken while new submarines are being tested. It is only fair to the men who are risking their lives to strengthen our defences.

* * *

ROSS PHILLIPS, farmer: If the British navy has not already adopted the diving bell that is being used by the United States for such rescue work, I think that it should do so at once. The work with the diving bell on the U.S. submarine that sank off Portsmouth N.J., recently, is ample proof of its efficiency and worth.

VIOLET GROVE FOLK GET AID SEE ROYALTY

Stranded At Rocky Rapids, Party Of 13 Rushed To City

This is a story of 12 little boys and girls, and a 49-year-old lady. Stranded 100 miles from the city Friday when the bus which should have taken them to Edmonton was crowded to capacity, they finally were able to come to the city, and in reward for their loyalty, special permission was granted them to stay on the C.N.R. platform in order to see the departure of the King and Queen.

It all happened as follows: The little party, from Violet Grove, were left behind at Rocky Rapids when the bus taking the rest of the school children from the district into the city had no room for them. This after four of the children had trudged seven miles to come to the bus.

SENDS TRUCK

Distress messages brought word of their plight to local citizens. One lady, Mrs. T. B. T. Hewett, 10512 128 street, heard the message. She asked a friend of hers, Harry Patrick, 24, 10255 93 street, to rush out with his truck and bring the stranded party into the city.

This meant that Harry would have to miss seeing the Royal Progress himself, as Rocky Rapids was a hundred miles away and it was already after one o'clock Friday. He made the sacrifice. The kiddies and the lady, Mrs. Robert Hoffling, who had two children in the party, were brought to the city at 7 p.m.

The Royal progress was over, the children had come here too late and some of them began to cry that they had made the trip for nothing. "We have not seen our King and Queen," they sobbed.

Touched by their sorrow, Mrs. Hewett got in touch with C. H. Grant, K.C. chairman of a subcommittee of the Royal Visit committees.

She told him what had happened. The resources of the Royal Visit committee were mobilized to help twelve kiddies and tha at a time when the committee was busy with the thousand and one details connected with the King's visit.

COLEMAN CONTACTED

Finally, E. H. Coleman, K.C., chairman of the interdepartmental committee in charge of the Royal Tour and under-secretary of state for Canada, was reached on the Royal Train.

He gave them special permission to stand on the platform, together with Mrs. Hoffling, to see Their Majesties. The same privilege was extended to Mrs. Hewett, Harry Patrick, and one or two others who had helped to bring the party here.

Not only that, Mr. Coleman, former dean of the Manitoba Law school and brother of D. C. Coleman, vice-president of the C.P.R., came out personally on the platform to see the children and wish them a happy sight of the King and Queen.

The lucky party consisted of Mrs. Robert Hoffling, Kenneth Durham, 15, Arthur Durham, 11, Rose Hines, 8, Iris Stern, 8, Ehid Martin, 9, Leo Bereczwasky, 14, Leonard Litke, 14, Raymond Durham, 16, Milton Durham, 13, Freddy Erickson, 11, Vernon Hoffling, 11, Leona Hoffling, 9

6,000 Visitors See Decorations At Legislature

More than 6,000 visitors thronged the legislative buildings over the week-end to view the decorations and art work prepared for the Royal visit. In order to accommodate the large number who desired to visit the buildings, they were kept open until 8 p.m. Saturday instead of closing at 12 o'clock noon and were opened from 12 noon until 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Before doors opened Saturday there was a large crowd waiting to get in.

The register signed by Their Majesties in honor of the visit and by all presented to them at the buildings, was the greatest interest for the visitors. Other outstanding attractions were the fountain and flower garden in the main rotunda, the two throne chairs prepared for Their Majesties and the portraits specially painted for the visit.

In the accompanying layout are 10 Edmonton barristers-at-law who were honored on the occasion of the Royal visit last Friday, by being appointed King's Counsel. In all 21 Alberta lawyers were so honored. In addition to the 10 here, there were six in Calgary; two in Lethbridge and one in Medicine Hat, Coronation and St. Paul. In the layout they are shown in alphabetical order left to right.

AROUND THE TOWN

Edmonton Y.M.C.A. will hold its annual meeting in the dining-room of the Royal George hotel Tuesday, beginning at 6.30 p.m. O. C. McIntyre will occupy the chair.

Meeting of the Central Social Credit Group will be held at the Institute of Applied Arts, 109 street, commencing at 8 p.m. Tuesday. Orvis A. Kennedy, M.P. for East Edmonton, will be present.

About $610 were subscribed by Edmonton citizens to the Navy League of Canada during its recent financial campaign, it was announced Monday. The league assists widows and orphans of men of the merchant marine, maintains sailors' homes and institutes in large Canadian ports.

Following many requests, Ald. Douglas Grout announced Monday that he would leave the decorations and illumination on his home at 10941 89 avenue for a few days. Ald. Grout's home is one of the outstanding residences of the city in decoration for the Royal Visit. It is brilliantly illuminated at night. Thousands of people already have called to view it.

Only one glass was broken Friday night at the provincial government's dinner in the Macdonald, and no other damage was done to the special set being used at the banquet in honor of the King and Queen, hotel officials said Monday. Another glass is unaccounted for, but officials are hopeful that a further check-up will locate it.

J. H. Tremblay, Liberal member of the legislature for Grouard, left Sunday for High Prairie, where on Friday, June 9, he will attend the Grouard constituency Liberal nominating convention. It is expected that K. L. Gray, Alberta Liberal leader, will be the main speaker at the convention, and that he will pass through here Thursday on his way north.

Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines, who headed a delegation to Great Britain to discuss with British Admiralty and other officials possible use of Turner Valley oil in case of war, is expected to return here on Thursday. He and Mrs. Tanner are now on their way west. Others in the delegation were W. F. Knode, chairman of the Alberta Gas Conservation Commission, and Mrs. Knode; Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Campbell of this city, and Dr. G. S. Hume, Ottawa, Dominion government geologist. Mr. and Mrs. Knode have arrived at Calgary after their trip.

During the last four seasons bounties paid by the provincial agriculture department on wolves and cougars totalled $11,762, according to figures released on Monday by government officials. As destruction of predatory animals is one of the main activities of the provincial game branch, their destruction is encouraged by payment of bounties. In the 1935-1936 season total payments for bounties were $1,357; the 1936-37 season saw $2,383 paid out; the 1937-38 season $2,549, and the 1938-39 season $5,473. In 1937-38 there were 349 timber wolves, 12 timber wolf pups and 39 cougars turned in for bounties.

Dr. G. M. Little, city health officer, addressed the Kiwanis Club Monday at the Macdonald on "The Medicine Man."

At the anual meeting of the Edmonton branch of the Associated Canadian Travellers, held in the Corona hotel Saturday, F. C. Holden was elected president of the organization, succeeding H. A. Kerr. J. A. Taylor was elected first vice-president, and H. A. Jacques second vice-president.

Nominating convention will be held in High Prairie Friday afternoon to select a Liberal candidate for the Grouard riding, H. H. Tremblay, M. L.A., is the sitting member of the constituency and it is expected that he will be given the unanimous nomination Friday. E. L. Gray, M. L.A., will address the convention.

Hearing of an appeal brought by W. S. Plawiuk, formerly courthouse interpreter at Edmonton, against conviction and six-month sentence imposed on him by Mr. Justice W. C. Ives on a charge of conspiring to commit perjury opened in the Alberta appeal court Monday morning. The hearing is proceeding.

Another giant Peacock butterfly found its way into the editorial room of The Edmonton Bulletin on Monday morning. The beautifully colored creature with a wing spread of five and one half inches fluttered into the home of J. H. Kern, 14523 102 avenue, on Saturday night gaining entrance through an open window.

Premier William Aberhart's constituency of Okotoks-High River will be invaded this week by two non-caucusing Social Credit members of the legislature, namely, S. A. G. Barnes, Edmonton, and A. E. MacLellan, Innisfail. They will speak at Okotoks on Thursday night. Mr. Barnes, along with J. W. Hugill, K.C., Independent, Calgary, will speak at a Calgary meeting Monday night, being held under auspices of the Independent Progressive committee.

Holding there was not sufficient evidence on which to convict, the Alberta court of appeal Monday set aside a conviction imposed by Magistrate A. Koch on Steve Insinger, Peers district mailman, on a charge of stealing three-and-a-half pounds of cream valued at 60 cents the property of Arthur Barras. Shining Bank district farmer, who formerly held the contract for delivering the mail. Insinger was given one year suspended sentence on the charge by Magistrate Koch when tried before him on January 13.

Problems related to the production of forage crops will be threshed out at a field day to be held at the Vermilion agriculture school on Thursday next, June 8. In addition to talks and discussions on forage crops, visitors will be taken on a tour of the plots to observe the progress made by forage crops on the school farm. Particular attention has been given to mixtures of grasses and legumes as this type of crop is very much in demand. The program will get under way at 1:15 under direction of D. A. Andrew, farm manager. The public is invited to attend.

VETERANS AT SERVICE HERE OVER WEEKEND

Parade Is Marred By Rain —Units Gather At Memorial Hall

Church parade of Edmonton's war veterans to celebrate the visit of Their Majesties to northern Alberta was marred Sunday by steady rain which necessitated the abandonment of the march through city streets to the legislative buildings' grounds. The church parade was held at the Memorial Hall with Rev. Capt. C. F. A. Clough officiating.

More than 250 men of the Canadian Legion, Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Canadian Corps Association, Red Chevron Club and the Imperial Veterans braved the driving rain to participate.

Music for the service was supplied by the Edmonton School Boys' band. Prior to the service the colors of the Canadian Legion and other units were placed on the platform by members of special color parties.

Speaking on the "Royalty of Citizenship", Canon Clough stated that the King stands for the highest and best ideals in the nation. In that way, he becomes the King of each individual, the rector said, pointing out that the relationship of the subject to the crown is very personal.

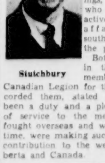

CONCEPTION OF DUTY

"In that way the King becomes King of each one of us and each of us has a part of the kingship which calls for the same high conception of duty as is required in His Majesty," said the padre.

He enjoined the comrades to be true to the high principles of justice and mercy for which the Empire stood.

TWO RECEIVE LIFE BADGES FROM LEGION

Members of the Canadian Legion, at their general convention Saturday, honored Howard Stutchbury for his untiring efforts on behalf of the returned men of Alberta and Canada with their presentation to him of the Honorary Life Presidency Badge.

Another recipient of the honor was Harry Hollingna, Calgary, who has been active in Legion affairs in the southern part of the province.

Both recipients, in thanking the members of the Canadian Legion for the honor accorded them, stated that it had been a duty and a pleasure to be able to do the men who had fought overseas and who, in peace time, were making such a splendid contribution to the welfare of Alberta and Canada.

It was inadvertently reported in The Bulletin last week that Marie Stacey, who presented a bouquet to Her Majesty here Friday, was an orphan. It was learned over the week-end that she is the daughter of Clifford Stacey, 10542 101 street.

ALBERTA MOTOR ASSOCIATION ROAD REPORTS

Safety Slogan: Motorists, drive carefully with consideration for the convenience as well as the safety of others.

Road report for Monday: Carrot Creek and Edson, road good; heavy rains during night. Chauvin greasy. Hughenden, muddy; light rain overnight. Veteran, Thorsby and Cherhill, muddy. Edmonton-Calgary, good. There are some bad spots around Stony Plain on the Jasper highway where construction work is being carried on. All other roads are okay.

Through The Mill

Highlight in police court Monday had nothing to do with crime. It was the presentation to the court of a new framed photographic study of His Majesty King George VI by newspapermen. The picture of King George V has been moved from its place behind the magistrate to a new place of honor on a side wall.

Presentation was made by Basil Dean to Magistrate A. L. Millar, K.C., who handed it to Court Orderly John Gale, who hung it on the flag behind the cadi. Speeches of appreciation were given by Chief A. G. Shute, C. G. Purvis, crown prosecutor, and E. B. Cogswell, K.C., as well as Magistrate Miller.

A meeting of the management and health committee of the Edmonton school board will be held in the Beard room, 510 Civic Block, Edmonton, on Tuesday, June 6, at 8 p.m.

KING, QUEEN MEET MANAGER JASPER LODGE

Their Majesties again showed their talent for doing the gracious thing, it was learned Saturday, when they were at Jasper.

Before leaving Jasper Park Lodge, they asked for Robert Sommerville, the lodge manager, and his wife, and before bidding them good-bye, presented Mr. Sommerville with cuff links of blue and gold enamel with the Royal insignia.

Mr. Sommerville said that the King stated that he and the Queen had enjoyed their visit at the famed resort, adding that it was all too short.

At Jasper National Park station, Their Majesties presented to Major J. A. Wood, superintendent of the park, a picture of themselves autographed by each of them.

Major Wood also was given a pair of black enamel cuff links with the Royal insignia.

HAWAII

In Hawaii, dusky maidens sway to native tunes strummed on ukeleles. When a ukelele string breaks the dusky maidens stop swaying and write to Brooklyn for more ukelele strings.

When in love, take your girl to Hawaii. The moonlit beach, the swaying palms, the lagoons that sparkle like jewels—all will melt her heart like wax. In fact, if you'll flash the dough that the trip costs in front of her in the first place, her heart would melt like wax, too, and save a lot of time besides.

At night, the "Song of the Islands" steals across the still waters. Otherwise, Hawaiians are very honest.

Hawaii is a land of dreams, especially for the people who own the hotels and the beach concessions.

You Can Be Proud of A Healthy, Happy Pet

Know Rules for Easy Care

Going to clip your dog this spring? Don't! It's cruel to torture your pet this way. Comb him at shedding time instead, and be proud of his handsome coat.

Your dog needs his long outer hair this summer. It protects him against hot sun, flies and mosquitoes. So don't clip, warns a leading authority on dogs. Daily combing during spring shedding removes the tangled undercoat, and makes him, oh, so comfortable. Combing and brushing keep him clean, too, and cut down on baths. Washing too often removes natural hair oils, makes his coat harsh and dull, his skin itchy.

Our 32-page booklet gives other tips on keeping your pet healthy and happy. It gives step-by-step lessons for training. Tells how to treat distemper and other illnesses. All about feeding, grooming and housebreaking, too.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "How to Choose and Care for Your Dog" to The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service, Edmonton, Alberta. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Announcing a String of All-Star Writers for Summer Fiction

Janet Doran

HAILS from Keene, New Hampshire. Began writing stories when she found herself dissatisfied with the endings either writers wrote her stories. Her first story at the "ripe old age of 22." Then turned to poetry "but recovered when he married another girl." After that, cracked the big circulation magazines, scoring two successful novels, "Song My Heart," "Gilded Lady," and one operetta. Still likes music immensely enough to follow the Pied Piper but serial writing takes too much time. Stories read by millions.

Edwin Rutt

HOME is New York city where he is copy writer for one of the country's largest advertising agencies. But the world is his heart. Traveled most of it during his vacations which accounts for the cosmopolitan character of his short stories appearing in the American, Country Gentleman, Liberty and others. Writing a streamlined fare-thee-well to his specialties of which "Hold-up Honeymoon" and "Haywire House" are notable examples. Editors still talking about these two 1938 summer successes.

the reading habit of Alberta • • • short serials

FOUR years ago THE EDMONTON BULLETIN introduced short summer serials for hot-weather and vacation reading. Today they've become the fiction habit of BULLETIN readers; from June to September.

The 1939 program offers five fast-moving stories. Writing these are five big names, authors who appear in Collier's, the American, The Ladies' Home Journal and many other leading magazines. Yet THE BULLETIN brings you their first-run serials! No other newspaper gives you so many first-run stories from top-flight writers throughout the year.

Janet Doran's timely, vital serial with a pointed appeal for all of us, "Bride on a Budget," 12 chapters — briefly, the story of a girl who thought love came first and the bills could take care of themselves. Elinore Cowan Stone's thrilling seaside mystery, "Murder on the Boardwalk," 18 chapters, a tale of intrigue and stolen bonds and an Oriental taker who described a crime before it happened.

Edwin Rutt's inimitable records of two goofs who golfed to win a girl, "Par Is Love," 12 chapters, a rousing and dramatic story of America and national defense and mutuality, and a fine laughter producer, "War and a Woman," by Betty Wallace, 13 chapters — and finally, Oren Arnold's colorful 18-chapter story of summer tourists and adventure on an abandoned south-west mining claim, "Ghost Detour."

Thus THE BULLETIN lands for again big names, big stories, big illustrations and stories that will grip the most fickle. Here are exciting days in BULLETIN summer reading. Watch for these serials, we know you'll enjoy every one.

Looking Them Over

Grey Intrigues

No Exception

Captain Eaton

MAYBE I'm just a sucker for a story with a historical background, but anyhow whenever I see a grey thoroughbred dancing out to the starting post I can't help remembering that every grey thoroughbred that we have today is a descendant of either Alcock's Arabian or Brownlow's Turk—two grey stallions that were brought from Arabia and Syria respectively to England between 1711 and 1714. You'd think that a grey would come along by chance once in awhile—but the exact breeding records of the thoroughbred show that every grey horse must have at least one grey parent. Once the grey line is broken, there is no reversion in subsequent generations to grey ancestors.

Knowing my weakness for fine old slants, Denny Layzelle sends me along some mighty interesting dope from Polo Park at Winnipeg where Carminowe, the beautiful grey mare from Captain Frank Eaton's stable at Alix, Alberta, made her first start on Friday, finishing fifth in the fifth race of the day.

There is something intriguing about a grey horse. The public seems to think that the grey cannot stand up with the other racing stock. But in this the public is wrong. The turf world needs point no farther than that sensational "grey ghost" The Tetrarch. There too Marengo, which Napoleon rode on the battlefields, was grey to the point of whiteness.

But let us stop and consider Carminowe. Last season she started but five times. Won the President's Handicap at Polo Park, 6½ furlongs in 1:19 4-5, a new track record; set the pace in the thirteenth running of the Polo Park Handicap—an event that saw the greatest finish in Winnipeg's colorful turf history—only to be passed out in the closing strides. Carminowe was second, third and fourth in her other three trips postwards.

For two years previously she raced in the Eaton colors—ever since being imported from England. She won at Breckingham and Long-grens. Always she possessed that terrific speed. She could carry it from six furlongs to a mile and one-sixteenth. Always a brilliant front runner she set a terrific pace.

Ran Gauntlet of Pirates

IT IS from Alcock's Arabian and Brownlow's Turk that all grey horses descend. A British book records Alcock's Arabian from the plains of Araby, battling a storm in the Bay of Biscay to land the grey sire in England. It was at almost the same time that a naval auxiliary sailed over seas infested with pirates bringing Brownlow's Turk from Syria to London. While the exact date is not known the two grey sires were brought to England between 1711 and 1714. From one or both, without exception, every grey thoroughbred in the world inherited its color—through an unbroken chain of grey ancestors.

But when Carminowe is mentioned one must immediately consider Captain Frank Eaton of Alix, Alberta, farmer, owner, trainer, breeder and a director of The Prairie Thoroughbred Breeders' and Racing Association. He has contributed much to the success of racing in the West.

Everyone interested in thoroughbreds has dreamed of the day when the pioneers of a whole region can be renewed. Success on the rare courses of North America is immediately visualized. To these men racing is not a game. It is a business. It is Captain Eaton's business and he presents the type of sportsman to which racing owes its existence.

Winner From Palm To Pine

IN THE past decade the Eaton stable has been shipped to the leading race centres of the continent. The primrose silks of the Western stable were seen at Havana, Cuba, when racing at Oriental Park was at its peak. At Havana, Miami, New York, New England, Toronto, Spokane, Vancouver, California, Seattle and Mexico as well as on the western racing Eaton-owned thoroughbreds have galloped to victory.

This season Captain Eaton has to Winnipeg a stable of 10 head. With the exception of Carminowe they are all Canadian breds many of which he bred himself. Heading the list are two young Dominions. Running Rein and Dover Patrol, and the grand handicap star, Pennycuick. Trainer Baby Trevarton has the stable in great form and before the Whittier Park meeting a many days old the primrose silks of Captain Eaton should flash to victory.

BRITISH POLO SQUAD BEATEN BY AMERICANS

United States Team Wins Opener of Series by Score of 11-7

By H. M. PETERS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

WESTBURY, N.Y., June 5.—Hitting the ball harder and showing better teamwork than their opponents, the United States Sunday opened defence of the Westchester cup, emblem of international polo supremacy, with an 11-7 victory over Great Britain on the turf of the Meadowbrook Club. The second game will be played next Sunday.

Paced by the great Tommy Hitchcock and Stewart Inglehart, the Americans broke away in front with two goals in the first two minutes and never were headed. They outdrove and outpaced outride the strongest four assembled since the British last won the $200 mug in 1914.

INGLEHART IS STAR

Hitchcock, handicapped at 10 goals for 17 days, crowned four times from No. 2 position to share scoring honors with Mike Phipps at No. 1, but it was Inglehart who drew the admiration of the crowd of 18,000 and the British alike. Inserted in the lineup only Saturday when Cecil Smith was forced to withdraw because of injuries, the 29-year-old rider was brilliant on defence and scored one goal. Winston Guest scored the other two American goals.

The Britons outscored the Americans in the second, fourth and eighth chukkers. Playing Captain Gerald Balding scored three of Britain's goals, as did Skene, the brilliant young Australian. Eric Tyrrell-Martin scored once.

Roark was injured in the second chukker when his pony, Royal Mint, rolled over in a collision with Phipps' mount. Roark fell clear but bruised his left shoulder. He returned to action in a few minutes but was not up to his usual form.

GERMANS OUST ENGLISH FROM DAVIS CUP PLAY

BERLIN June 5.—Germany eliminated England from Davis Cup competition Sunday when the Berlin doubles team of Heinrich Henkel and Georges Metaxa defeated J. Shaffi and F. H. D. Wilde in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

The victory gave the Germans a clean sweep in the first three matches. Germany will face the winner of the Yugoslavia-Belgium matches in the European finals next month.

BELGIUM TRAILS YUGOSLAVIA BY 2-1

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, June 5—Belgium upset Yugoslavia Sunday afternoon, but still two matches to one in their third round Davis Cup tennis play. Leopold Lecroix and his partner De Borman defeated Ferenc Puncec and Dimitri Mitic, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 Sunday after the team had both opening singles matches yesterday.

DISCUSS SITE OF 1944 GAMES

LONDON, June 5.—The 1944 Olympic Games were expected to be awarded to London this week as 40 members of the international Olympic committee arrived here for a meeting of four days' duration.

Among those coming for the 13th Olympiad are Detroit, Rome and Lausanne, Switzerland.

Olympic committee members will be guests at a dinner Tuesday at which Gloucester will greet them at St James' palace.

Berlin at held the games in 1968.

Yugoslavia Sweeps Zone Semi-finals

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, June 5 — Yugoslavia swept the first two singles matches in the Belgium-Yugoslavia semi-finals of the European zone Davis cup competition when Ferenc Puncec beat Leopold Lecroix 6-2, 6-3, 6-3, 7-5 and Dimitri Mitic defeated Pierre Gerlaand 6-0, 6-4, 6-4.

Indianapolis '500' Grind Is Quick Race—With Death

By HENRY McLEMORE

Special Bulletin Sport Writer

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 5.—Notes written on the "500" after the motors were stilled and all the numbers were up.

You go quickly at Indianapolis. . . . One minute Floyd Roberts was as alive as the thundering car he whipped into the turn at better than 100 miles per hour. . . . The next he was over the wall and bound for the finish line where the checkered flag falls for keeps. . . .

I talked to Roberts in the pits, just before the race started, and his big face was all smiles. . . . "I have the car that can do it," he said. "Tonight I'll have twenty grand in my kick, and you won't hear any more about a driver not being able to win. Not in a race."

Here's an ironic twist: By dying, Roberts saved the 107.807 m.p.h. record he established last year. . . . He required 31 minutes to clear the track after his fatal accident and the drivers were held to slow speeds by the yellow flag during this time. . . . Had the green flag been up all the way the winner would have had to average better than 120. . . .

LOU'S LUCK ALL BAD

Lou Meyer had all the luck of the race—and it was all bad. . . . A lap ahead at 455 miles, and with his fourth triumph just around the corner, a plain, common old ordinary flat tire knocked him out of the load . . . The flat came at the turn off the straightaway and the worst possible place—in the first full two miles from his pit. . . . He was out of it when he finished bumping around the track on the puncture. . . . It took his crew but 35 seconds to supply him with a new wheel and he roared away to save second money. . . . But Lady Luck had it in for Lou. . . . On the 190th lap, just 75 miles from home, he went into another spin and had to call it quits.

Jimmy Snyder, the lovable madman from Chicago, who won second place, is a glutton for punishment. . . . A few hours after driving the 500 miles he jumped into a passenger car and started driving to Chicago. . . . Snyder and Rex Mays are fair and away the best actual drivers of racing cars in the country. . . . Unlike most of the other chauffeurs, who fight the wheel, Jimmy and Rex bullet around with the ease and assurance of Papa taking the family for a Sunday spin in the two-door sedan.

The 500-mile race's answer to the critics who have been lambasting it as a sorry and worthless show is an average of between 120 to 600 and 140/000. . . . Wilbur Shaw's victory in a foreign car (Italian Maserati) is expected to result in a flock of European machines to the 1940 race. . . . Until Shaw brought the Maserati in first, an import job hadn't won since Howdy Wilcox piloted 1919.

RATED FASTEST

The officials would like to see Germany send an Auto Union next year. . . . They are reputedly the fastest thing on wheels . . . Mrs. Shaw did not give either her husband or Sig. Ascari credit for the victory. . . . She said it was all due to the ladybug she found on her carriage just before the race started. . . . "I tucked the bug away in my purse—it brought the luck we had to have."

No sports event in the country presents such stirring scenes as the "500" . . . There isn't a single

LANARK ACE PACES SCOTS AGAINST B. C.

Centre Star Scores Hat Trick as Tourists Register 4-2 Triumph

NANAIMO, B.C., June 5—A hat trick by Jack Jones of Third Lanark, centre-forward, and safe booting of Jimmy Dykes of Hearts gave the touring Scottish soccer team a 4-2 victory over an Upper Vancouver Island eleven here Saturday.

It was the tourists' fifth win in six games of their North American tour. They had won previously in Montreal, Detroit, St. Louis and Calgary, and scored a tie in New York.

TOOK EARLY LEAD

The touring squad scored in Saturday's game 21 minutes after the start when they were awarded a penalty against the home team. Ben Ellis of Motherwell scoring the goal.

All-stars' defence withered during the rest of the half and shortly after Jones scored his second goal. Ellis paved the way for Jones second goal when he lobbed the ball right to the goal mouth. Archie Johnstone, in the net for the Island team, made a perfect save but the rebound went to Jones who scored.

The goal that gave Jones his hat trick was scored on a cross from Jimmy Gaskie, Everton ace, the centre-forward heading the ball into the net at the 33-minute mark.

GOT B.C.'S FIRST

The Islanders pressed throughout the second half and put the Scottish off their stride with a short passing game. Five minutes after the interval Alvin Parks of Revan, B.C., playing at inside right, scored the Island team's first goal, taking a rebound from a shot by Euke Lee of Port Alberni which the Scottish goalie, Jerry Dawson, had jabbed out of the net.

Following Tantrum of Bevan, centre-forward, scored the Islanders' second goal a minute before time, driving in a rebound after Dawson had saved a shot by Parks.

In a low scoring game that found the Legion seven players short, and some excellent bowling on the part of Chambers for the Radials, the Legion were held to mere impotent fielding of the Radial team. The Legion just managed to win by 28 runs. Harry Cooper Triumphs Goodall Golf Tourney

NEW YORK, June 5.—Harry Cooper, too steady for any of his 14 rivals, won first prize of $1,000 and the $500 Goodall trophy Sunday in the second annual Goodall round-robin golf tournament at the Fresh Meadow Country Club.

Cooper, who shot his way into the lead in Saturday's two rounds with a point score of plus 26, tacked on 10 more points in this morning's round with his third par 70, and, although he dropped five points to Ben Hogan and Jimmy Thomson in his final round, finished with plus

Wins by Five Lengths In Easy Triumph

NEW YORK, June 5.—Johnstown just about cleared up any lingering doubt as to his right as champion of the United States three-year-olds Saturday by galloping home a five-lengths winner in the 71st running of the classic Belmont stakes.

Adding this 1½-mile test to his conquests in the Withers mile, the Kentucky Derby, the Wood Memorial and the Paumonok, William Woodward's whirlwind ran away from a field of five others.

Starting from the rail, he broke on top and covered the long run in two minutes, 29 3-5 seconds, one second off the track record.

BATTLE FOR PLACE

In the stretch, A. C. Bostwick's Belay and Mrs. H. C. Phipps Gilded Knight battled it out for the place position and Belay finally won out by half a length with the Knight third and the Earle Sande-trained Heather Brook a length farther back in fourth place.

With a lightning fast track the 20,000 spectators backed Johnstown far down in the betting, winding up at 1 to 6, "out and out" for place and show. Belay was 7-1 for place.

HAS WON $156,065

Victory in this $25,000 added stake was worth $37,020 to Johnstown's owner, bringing the winnings for Johnstown's big boy to $156,035 for his two-season racing career.

All the colts carried 126 pounds.

BOB PENTLAND SIGNS TO PLAY WITH ESKIMOS

Edmonton Athletic Club Defence Star Will Play Senior Here

Bob Pentland, brilliant right-defence star of the Edmonton Athletic Club juniors in that club's great drive to the Memorial cup final last season, on Saturday affixed his signature to a contract to play for Edmonton Eskimos in the Alberta Senior Hockey League next winter.

Announcement of the signing of Pentland was made last night by Barney Goldsworthy, business manager of the Edmonton Sports Boosters Club, who stated that the young defence ace had agreed to terms to meet the Maple Leaf Athletic professional for another year, at least.

Weighing 182 pounds, Pentland not only is a sound defensive player but is an excellent runner, whom, as Goldsworthy points out, is extremely essential in a modern defenceman.

He is the third new player to be signed by the Eskimos since they started their drive to build a real contender for the 1939-40 Alberta Senior League campaign. Centre Eddie O'Keefe and Goalie Ray Robbins, of last year's Olds Elks, signed with the club some time ago.

The Eskimo management is far from satisfied as yet and intend to sign a number of more new men before long, as they are carrying on negotiations with quite a few players at the present time.

New Shortstop of Bees Much Like Hans Wagner

NEW YORK, June 5.—Whenever Duffy Lewis, member of the most famous outfield in baseball history and current secretary of the Boston Bees, looks at Eddie Miller, the club's new shotstop, he conjures up a picture of Hans Wagner.

"He looks like Hans out there," said Lewis. "Hugs the ground like Wagner used to and slifarms the ball. Amazing grip for him."

For all of Miller's rattiness, he features a fielding style reminiscent of Rabbit Maranville. The Pittsburgh product never saw Maranville, yet he takes pop flies against his stomach, hands cupped against the drop of the sphere, as did "Rab".

Even when he goes into short left or centre for a drifter, he twists himself under the pellet so as to make a basket catch rather than reach for the ball over his shoulders. He says that it's just a habit.

"I don't believe I catch them exactly like the Rabbit did," explains Miller. "Pops all I hear he practically hugged himself and the ball almost disappeared inside his pants or sweater. I don't like them as close to the body, even though it may look that way.

"I'm afraid to reach up for a ball. I never have. Some day, I suppose, I'll have to grab for one and then I don't know what will happen.

But as long as he can run under them, Eddie Miller says he'll wait for them to come d

EXPLANATION OF TODAY'S CARTOON

VICTOR McLAGLEN'S COAT: Victor McLaglen, Hollywood star, received what is probably the quickest long distance delivery of a London coat on record. He was in Hollywood when he decided to order the coat. His measurements were cabled to London May 1; the coat was tailored in London and air expressed to Frankfort, Germany, on May 4; it arrived at Lakehurst, N.J., aboard the dirigible Hindenburg May 7, and was flown to California overnight, arriving in Hollywood May 8.

HITLER CLAIMS ENCIRCLEMENT PRESAGES WAR

Anglo-French Policy Reverts To Days Of Great Conflict

KASSEL, Germany, June 5.—Reichfuehrer Hitler Sunday told a crowd of German war veterans that Great Britain and France are pursuing a policy of "encirclement," revising international practices which he said led to the Great War.

But, Hitler declared, there have been fundamental changes in Germany, the chief being a determination not to neglect armament and defence as he said, they were neglected by the Kaiser's government before 1914.

Today, he said, "Germany is unimpressed by threats no matter from what quarter they come."

The former corporal told his Great War comrades-at-arms that Germany's leaders must be soldierly.

"I have seen to it that anyone who has anything to do with the leadership of the state is a 100 per cent man and soldier," he said. "If ever I observe that any person cannot measure up to those responsibilities he will be dismissed from his post—no matter who he may be."

"If the English encirclement policy remains what it was in 1914," Hitler added, "it must be observed that Germany defence policy has been fundamentally altered."

PARIS, June 5—Premier Daladier today predicted a "prompt and successful conclusion" to efforts to extend the British-French anti-aggression front.

The premier, who has virtual dictatorial power to rule France by decree until next November, delivered an account of his leadership of French domestic and foreign policy to the executive committee of his Radical Socialist party.

The committee unanimously adopted a resolution approving Daladier's policies.

"We say no to aggression," Daladier asserted. "We say no to autarchic tyranny, we say no to ideological fanaticism, we say no to claims of pretended vital space, we say no to all violence and brutality.

"Our refusal is that of all nations attached to peace, that of all free men. It has no other goal than to permit peace to be saved in the honor and independence of all nations."

Daladier said the French government had "exerted all its efforts and still exerts them to permit Europe to live happily in free collaboration," "but," he added:

"I want to give an assurance to the world that France is in the front rank of powers which will prevent Europe from being drawn into catastrophe by undertakings of domination."

Possibles Stage Rally To Win Soccer Test 3-2

STAGING a three-goal rally in the last half, Possibles defeated the Probables Saturday evening at Clarke Stadium by a 3-2 score. The game was merely a test match to see how the selection of players would be in picking the team to play Calgary here in the inter-city Hudson's Bay trophy competition.

Probables opened the scoring after about 20 minutes when Ted Lewis drove a hard one from well out. The bullet shot beat Souch easily.

KEPT UP PRESSURE

The Probables kept up the pressure but could not find an opening until close to the breather, when G. Ross got in close and beat Souch with a nice left shot. This gave the Probables a 2-0 margin going into the second half.

After the interval the Possibles took control of the game. Curly Johnson gave them a start when he got close in between the backs to beat Ness. Shortly after Shaw got away and scored to bring the Possibles on even terms with their picked foe.

Johnson completed the scoring shortly after his front mate had placed his team on even footing. Johnson's was a solo effort and he beat Ness smartly.

THE LINEUPS

Probables—W. Ness, N. Neale, G. Dempsey, P. James, T. Lewis, A. Scott, C. Francis, J. Smith, G. Ross, W. Gordon, P. Topping.

Possibles—C. Souch, R. Kay, R. Laurie, A. Thompson, W. Lunde, L. Smitten, R. Shaw, J. Scott, N. Johnson, D. Skidmore, D. Cavanaugh.

FEW BREAK-INS ARE REPORTED OVER WEEKEND

Reports of break-ins into three city homes and the arrest of one man caught coming out of one of them were contained in police reports of occurrences in this city over the week-end.

Mrs. M. Gaston, 9361 103 avenue, said as she returned to her home Saturday evening she met a man coming out of her room. He choked her and told her to keep quiet, she told police. Entering her room she found $15 had been stolen from her purse.

K. J. Street, 10337 93 street, said his home was entered Saturday night and a camera and several pieces of jewelry belonging to a guest was taken.

Returing to her home at 11115 St. Albert Trail Saturday night Mrs. John Makepiece caught a man coming out of the side door. She called for help, ad Raymond Palmer, 10992 126 street, helped her hold the intruder until police came. They arrested the man on a charge of breaking and entering. He said his name was R. J. McKinley.

Greatest Days

May 28 when Their Majesties took an unscheduled motor drive over the Great Divide to Field, B.C. Twenty-two hours in the rustic setting of Jasper Park Lodge ended June 2 when the King and Queen resumed the heavy schedule of state visits.

UNEXPECTED APPEARANCES

And the royal couple were not content with the official stops scheduled to permit them to meet their subjects. At dozens of hamlets along the route they made unexpected appearances to talk with people lining the railway tracks.

On the return trip the King and Queen re-visited Manitoba points seen May 24 when westward bound. At Portage La Prairie, where 5,000 crowded at the station when the Royal train passed through the first time, 10,000 lined streets yesterday morning as Their Majesties stopped for an hour to attend divine service at the United church here.

250,000 LINE RAILWAY

At Winnipeg, where rain kept some of the crowd hidden in buildings along the May 24 route 250,000 persons, virtually the city's entire population, lined the railway for 20 miles as the silver and blue royal train swept by in brilliant sunshine.

Their Majesties stopped 39 minutes in Winnipeg and in the station rotunda talked informally with 120 disabled war veterans.

Last night they said goodbye to the west at Sioux Lookout, where 8,000 came from the northwestern Ontario frontiers to bid them welcome and say farewell.

Town Of Biggar Booms On Arrival Their Majesties

By THOS. WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

ROYAL PRESS TRAIN, Biggar, Sask., June 5—This town boomed today. Her population soured 2,242 to 15,000. From four points of the compass Saskatchewan folk trekked across the prairies in trains, cars, wagons, Bennett buggies—everything on wheels and where they had no wheels they came a horseback.

Both sides the railway track the crowds thronged. The ubiquitous snow fence, which has now become a feature of the Royal receptions in the towns and villages, were used to hold back the crowds south of the track, north of the track between the station and the stores. A solid mass of humanity congregated.

They came from Kindersley, Rosetown, Landis, Perdue, Canada and even from the Battlefords. The Cree Indians were present in full regalia and there were three bands, the Biggar Pipe Band, the Kinsman's band and the Rosetown Silver band.

Unity also gathered in its friends and neighbors for miles around and awaited the arrival of Their Majesties. There was the biggest crowd seen in Unity since the townsite was first settled.

Former Enemy Of England Pays Tribute To King

By THOMAS WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

ROYAL PRESS TRAIN, Melville, Sask., June 5—Once more a former enemy of England paid tribute of loyalty to England's king, and to Canada's king, when Thomas Swayne, lieutenant of the notorious Louis Riel, stood before Their Majesties today at Saskatoon.

Swayne is 104 years old. It was the first time he had been to Saskatoon from his North Battleford home since the railway was completed.

He had seen King George V. and Queen Mary when they visited Canada in 1901. He had fought with Louis Riel, but had lived to realize that British rule was good rule and that Canada was a United nation claiming his loyalty.

Behind Swayne, as though to emphasize this fact was a living, breathing Union Jack which fluttered as in the wind, although it was as substantial as 700 high school girls could make it.

DRESS IN COLORS

The youngsters were dressed in red, white and blue, and had colored kerchiefs. As the royal train came in they made a gay sight, a Union Jack. As Their Majesties looked at this living emblem, the girls in successive lines from the left, the flagstaff side, covered their faces with the kerchiefs, so that it appeared as though the flag fluttered.

Saskatoon's normal population is 45,000, but there were 125,000 people there Saturday. Sixteen special trains arrived from an area 300 miles in diameter. Four hundred municipalities sent their officials.

The stay in Saskatoon was short, and Their Majesties continued their eastern journey two hours later. At all the small towns and villages east of Saskatoon crowds gathered at the station. Watrous was a living panorama along the railway track. Her normal population is 1,100 but there were 12,000 gathered, with 120 schools from the surrounding country.

Their Majesties' visit has been well timed for the prairies are green with new spring growth and there is little of the stark desolation of the drouth years, with leafless trees and dry ponds, windblown fields and drifted roads. As the train rolled along prairie chickens drummed into the wind and waterfowl fluttered in the sloughs.

Gold Ore Samples Are Sent To Princesses

By THOS. WAYLING
Edmonton Bulletin Staff Correspondent

SIOUX LOOKOUT, June 5—Generally Sioux Lookout was a repetition of the small town reception. On the platform Jack Hammill, pioneer Ontario mining man had a blue leather case, containing gold ore samples from his new mine, with a gold plate that they were for the Princess Elizabeth. His own name did not appear at all. In fact he had asked Lord Tweedsmuir to present them to the Queen for the Princess but Her Majesty expressed the wish that Hammill present them himself, which he did.

This was one day the press and camera men and broadcasters never saw the King and Queen. They knew Their Majesties were having an interesting time because the pilot train kept stopping to wait for the royal train to catch up, which indicated Their Majesties were staying beyond schedule at Winnipeg and other stopping points.

STORE DEPLETED

The infinitesmal settlement at Niddrie also made the newspapers. The pilot train made an unscheduled stop at Niddrie to let the royal train catch up. It was quite a long stop and the press and camera crowd discovered that the one store at Niddrie was open.

Every place else on the royal progress has been a public holiday and all stores were closed, and the pilot train crowd haven't been able to spend any money or do any shopping.

So Niddrie store had more customers in half an hour than in the last month, and they bought everything from brown paper helmets to flyswatters. A famous British correspondent was met at the door by an American journalist in a brown helmet: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume."

When the train moved on the correspondents had cans of fruit, all-day suckers (the whole stock was depleted) and bags of fruit and chocolate bars.

AT WINNIPEG

In Winnipeg, Their Majesties walked into the rotunda of the Canadian National station, and there in a great circle were wheel chairs in which sat disabled veterans, and behind each chair a white-clad nurse. It was a striking spectacle, and Their Majesties with their infinite sympathy for the men and women who suffered lasting disability in the Great War, talked with the veterans, whose souls were uplifted as their Sovereigns chatted with them.

As the Royal train moved eastward through Manitoba there were crowds in every little town, and people lining the road bed, so great was the crush at some points that the train had to move slowly and so lost time.

At Wade Their Majesties detrained and took a walk alongside the track, exemplifying once more their gospel of physical fitness.

The day's journey was long and tiring but the Royal train must keep rolling all through the night and all day to reach Sudbury, the next scheduled stop this evening.

Motorcycle Rider Hurt In Accident Shows Improvement

Condition of Billy Foster, 20, of 10714 126 street, who was injured Thursday evening in a motorcycle accident, showed improvement Monday morning, it was reported by Dr. A. F. Anderson, Royal Alexandra hospital superintendent. Suffering skull fracture and concussion, Billy slept fairly well Sunday night and showed other signs of improvement.

ROYALTY CAR IS GUARDED DURING TOUR

Their Majesties' Car Is Well-Appointed — No License Plates

One of the "marked men" at the C.N.R. station on Friday when the Royal party arrived—and prior thereto—was Sergt. Major W. Cooper of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

Waiting in front of the station was the handsome car in which Their Majesties were to drive through this city and guarding it was Sergt. Maj. Cooper, a permanent force non-commissioned officer.

ROYAL BLUE

The car was a 12-cylinder Lincoln. It was finished in Royal blue upholstery and on the doors had the Royal coat-of-arms.

Cushions were provided, also in Royal blue. For Her Majesty there was inlaid in a cushion, a vanity case.

The car bore no license plate.

A blue light was affixed behind and above the driver. In daytime it is shielded by a plate and at night when His Majesty is in the car the light always shines. Near the light the Royal Standard flies.

DRIVER

The car was driven through city streets by Thomas Southgate, driver to His Excellency Lord Tweedsmuir, governor general of Canada, who was the first of the Royal party to come from the station after the train drew in.

Shortly after a member of the household staff brought out a light blue coat, fur-trimmed and placed in the car for Her Majesty. She did not wear it.

Immediately after the drive, this car was shipped to Sudbury where it will await Their Majesties' arrival.

In the guard-party there are six officials, three from the air force and three from the R.C.A.S.C.

"outside" for the first time. He was born in Red Lake and never saw a train before.

"Are you excited about seeing the King and Queen?" Howe was asked.

"Nope," was the reply.

"Were you afraid on the way down through the storm?"

"Nope," was all the rugged little northerner would say. "I was sick coming down but I'm not afraid to go back."

HIT BY STORM

Joe Mackle, just turned 14, told how the storm, which rocked and tossed the scows behind a chugging tug, struck as they entered the 110-mile stretch of treacherous Lac Seul. The children and seven adults grouped together under canvas tops as rain and wind whipped water into foam and breakers broke two feet above the six-foot sides of the craft.

Young Joe said manfully, "I wasn't sick but I felt it in my stomach."

39 GIRLS, 33 BOYS

R. W. Starratt, who came into the northland with a canoe and outboard motor in 1926 to build one of the north's largest air transportation systems, shepherded the "kids" and paid their way so they could greet the King and Queen. There were 39 girls and 33 boys ranging in age from eight to 16 years.

The scow journey was made because there were too many children to carry by plane, usual transportation mode in this northern wilderness.

Royal Train

stop, the train will move on to southwestern Ontario for four official stops tomorrow and seven on Wednesday before Their Majesties cross the border at Niagara Falls for four days in the United States.

INTERESTING TIME

The pastures of Perth and Middlesex, the sugar-beet and tomato fields of Kent and the great automobile factories of Windsor promise the King and Queen an interesting Tuesday's sightseeing.

On Wednesday the train will stop for an hour at London. At Hamilton it will pause an hour and 25 minutes in the afternoon. Again the train will strike south, this time through the vine-lands for a 10 minute stop at St. Catharines, from where the Royal party will motor to Niagara Falls.

There, in the gathering dusk, Their Majesties will have a last look at Ontario soil. They will be taken through the wind-tunnel beneath Niagara's thunderous cataract, and have dinner on a balcony overlooking the floodlit falls. At 10:10 p.m. E.D.T. they will cross into the United States and when they return to Canada it will be to Quebec's eastern townships.

Another Close-Up of Royal Visitors

—By Bulletin Staff Photographer.

Here's another shot of Their Majesties taken on the steps of the Legislative building Friday afternoon during ceremonies which included the reading of an address of welcome to Their Majesties by Premier Aberhart, and presentation of holders of the Victoria Cross and other Albertans to Their Majesties.

people at once took them into their affections.

SPONTANEOUS WELCOME

"The outstanding feature of the welcome was the spontaneity of it all.

"I am convinced by what Their Majesties said to me and by the remarks of Prime Minister Mackenzie King that they took very much impressed by the western spirit of welcome as exemplified by the people of Alberta.

"The two-mile long double-row of bleacher seats on Portage avenue and also the shorter one on the South Side filled with people and particularly with so many children all of whom got a close up view of Their Majesties, could not help impress them as one of the most unique and effective means of bringing the people and Their Majesties into a happy relationship. At no place in the Dominion did such an immense crowd of people (over 60,000 I believe) have such a close up view of Their Majesties and have it repeated from both sides of the Royal car as on Portage avenue.

"It was one of the grandest and most impressive sights and pleased the King and Queen very much."

The Premier read a telegram from the King expressing his gratitude for the welcome received here.

PROGRAM EXTENDED

Hon. Ernest C. Manning, minister of trade and industry, who assisted in the service, here declared that "I understand that on four occasions they exceeded the program as scheduled."

The premier replied, "Yes, that is so. They stopped at the Indian camp just after completing the Portage avenue reception.

"Then on the parliament steps they stopped and talked to some old veterans and ex-soldiers. In the third place they stopped at the University hospital and spent fully 15 minutes with the wounded veterans and infantile paralysis cases. And finally they came out on the balcony of the hotel to greet that immense closely packed audience in front of the hotel and on the roofs of the buildings and at all the windows."

Mr. Manning: "Did these extras throw the schedule out any?"

The premier replied, "No, the committee had the events so carefully planned and so generously and accurately timed that the schedule was almost perfect. Just here, Mr. Manning, I feel that Mr. Abbott and the committee deserve the heartiest congratulations of the people for the excellent detailed planning that was done. No detail was omitted."

Mr. Manning declared that "You seemed to have a good time at the banquet at night when you sat between the King and the Queen."

The Premier said, "Yes, I did, a most exquisitely splendid time. Both the King and Queen are excellent conversationalists and I was most interested in the matters that were discussed. In fact, Mr. Manning, Their Majesties are keenly jovial and have a very fine sense of humor."

Mr. Manning recalled that "We noticed that the King had a good laugh with you at one time."

Explaining this, the premier said, "Indeed he gave me cause with his dry humor to have much merriment. But, by the way who was that who started the singing of 'They are Jolly Good Fellows after the toasts?"

Mr. Manning replied that he did not know. "It evidently came from two or three enthusiastic government members but it didn't take long for everybody to join heartily in the singing."

The premier replied that "It was certainly an excellent gesture springing from the western spirit and Their Majesties appreciated it very much."

Mr. Manning: "Well, Alberta showed herself in her real true colors on Friday and I hope the world hears about it."

The premier declared that "Surely the welcome accorded Their Majesties by our people will put the quietus on the oft-repeated falsity that Alberta considers secession.

"The Alberta government and the Alberta people are not striving for a disloyal breaking up of Canada or any part of the British empire. We are only anxious to gain for our people that true democratic freedom and economic security which we can find only under the British flag and British constitution. But Manning, I think we should get along with our program."

The service was sponsored by the Bellevue Social Credit group, which sent its president, Mrs. Salter, to the meeting. The Bellevue group, explained Mrs. Salter, who was called to the platform by the premier, covers the Bellevue and part of the Highlands districts of this city. She pointed out that there are 93 paid up members in the group, which meets twice a month.

FORMED IN 1935

She said the group was formed in 1935 before the election. Since then Virginia Park group had been amalgamated with the Bellevue group and the Bellevue name was retained.

Mrs. Salter explained that the group's message suggested two words, loyalty and devotion.

Commenting on this, the Premier said that "That's very good, Mrs. Salter and it is a fitting message for the present time.

"When we hear men standing on the public platform and declaring that the one and only aim is to capture a political position and proposal for meeting the people's need, then we must feel the importance of the message of loyalty and vision.

"When we remember that in each of the other provinces we have had governments belonging to the old line parties and who have done little or nothing to help the common people, the thought that they are striving to organize a coalition to displace a government that has made such efforts and such strides to overcome the handicaps and oppressive methods of the present financial system we think Bellevue members that you may well write your message in block letters 12 feet high and stand it all across Canada. What is needed by the people today is loyalty and devotion."

FAVORED LAND

In his call to prayer, the Premier declared that "I feel very definitely the responsibility which is ours tonight as we remember the favors that have been ours during the last two weeks. Can anyone find fault with the wonderful weather we have had? Such splendid rains and such excellent sunshine. The rains we needed for the crops. The sunshine we needed for the Royal visit. And what sunshine we had. There could not have been a more perfect day for Their Majesties to enjoy the wonderful, extraordinary welcome that the people of Alberta desired to extend to them I can hardly get adjectives large enough to describe the situation. Surely we ought to be able to say most heartily as a people to a loving Father and God Father we thank thee."

Mrs. Charles MacNutt, the former Miss Ola Aberhart, daughter of Premier and Mrs. William Aberhart, was the soloist at the service, singing two solos, "Trust in Him" and "Does Jesus Care?". She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Manning.

Earl Davidson was in charge of the congregational singing.

President

W. R. McLAREN

president of the Edmonton branch of the Canadian Legion, who has been named president of the provincial command.

W. R. M'LAREN IS PRESIDENT LEGION GROUP

Edmonton Official Heads Provincial Command— Parley Successful

Delegates to the Canadian Legion provincial convention Saturday accorded Major W. R. McLaren an acclamation to the presidency of the Legion provincial command, while Alex Walker, Calgary, retiring president, was named honorary treasurer. Maj. McLaren is also president of the Edmonton branch of the Legion.

Other officers elected were: S. C. Heckbert, Vermilion, vice-president; W. Bullard, Calgary, Dominion representative; D. W. Morgan, Calgary, Imperial Veterans' representative; and Hugh C. Farthing, K.C., Calgary, Tuberculosis Veterans' representative.

The following were nominated zone representatives: J. S. McKenzie, Sexsmith; R. H. Inglis, Wetaskiwin; G. K. Watts, Vegreville; D. Smith, Red Deer; P. R. Discher, Vulcan; and J. H. Hallworth, Medicine Hat.

Calgary was selected as the venue of the next convention with J. Allen, Calgary, named as its chairman.

The convention this year was voted one of the most successful in the history of the Canadian Legion in Alberta. More than 350 accredited delegates and approximately 200 fraternal delegates were in attendance.

Delegates to the Canadian Legion rejected a re-solution Saturday that the Legion take an active part in politics, and also turned "thumbs down" on a resolution asking the federal government to eliminate war service exemptions in Canada in future and to act a date at which previous exemptions would become ineffective.

Resolutions calling on the federal government to prohibit the export of nickel and scrap iron to nations which might be shortly at war with Britain and the nations of the Commonwealth of British nations were passed.

Other resolutions rejected were a resolution restricting future immigration to Canada to 75 per cent British and French racial stock; the axing of preference to returned men in returning officers and enumerators in federal elections, and that all Canadian government appointments be made to Canadians only.

Games Are Stopped

Following complaints received from numerous individuals, city morality detectives led by Inspector J. J. Shaw shut down the wheels and rolling games at the Red River Shows on the corner of 100 street and 103 avenue Saturday evening. Side shows were not interfered with.

Wins Automobile

Mrs. Robert Sneddon, 12061 95 street, is winner of the automobile prize awarded Saturday at the Federation of Community Leagues carnival.
